Tories Take Gallup Lead

TORONTO (CP) — Gallup poll results released today show the federal Progressive Conservatives ahead of the Liberals among decided voters for the first time since January, 1977.

The Conservatives led with 42 per cent of the decided vote in the survey conducted early in October, compared with 37 per cent for the Liberals and 17 per cent for the New Democratic Party. Other parties accounted for four per cent.

Thirty-two per cent of the electorate remains undecided on which party to support.

Poll results released early in October from a survey in September showed the Liberals ahead with 41 per cent, followed by the Conservatives with 38 and the NDP with 17.

Taken less than two weeks before the Oct. 16 byelections in 15 federal ridings, the latest poll shows the Liberals hold a strong lead in Quebec but have lost strength in other parts of the country.

Gallup polls taken after the Liberal victory in the 1974 general election gave them a greater share of the decided vote until March, 1976, when the Conservatives took the lead and held it until the Liberals started leading again in February, 1977.

BNA Deal Bogs Down

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau failed today to convince all the premiers to accept a package giving the country a truly Canadian constitution with a realignment of federal and provincial powers.

During the final day of a three-day constitutional conference, Trudeau, backed by New Brunswick, Ontario and Manitoba, said a way should be found to allow Canada to amend its constitution without consulting the British Parliament while negotiations continue on power redistribution.

Quebec Premier Rene Levesque strongly objected, saying he is willing to negotiate only a new power sharing arrangement. He would consider patriating the 1867 constitution afterwards.

The premiers of Ontario, Saskatchewan and Newfoundland urged the meeting not to let Quebec's reluctance prevent any changes. They suggested a planned committee of federal and provincial ministers could seek agreements on areas everyone wanted to negotiate.

Carter Sets Out Drastic Action To Prop Dollar

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Applying drastic surgery to aid the ailing dollar, the U.S. government today announced an unprecedented big jump in interest rates, increased gold sales and a huge international currency swap to restore world confidence in American monetary policy.

The dollar rallied immediately and the world price of gold began to decline.

One price quoted for gold was about $222 an ounce, down about $20 from the previous day. Speculators who had invested heavily in gold were suddenly confronted with large losses.

The Dow Jones, which had tumbled 104 points in the last 12 trading days, jumped 27.72 to 820.17 by 3 p.m. (EDT).

The record single-day gain for the average was 32.93 points on Aug. 16, 1971.

The U.S. dollar shot upwards a fantastic 5½ per cent against the West German mark in hectic trading on the Frankfurt money exchange and there were dramatic rises against the British pound sterling and the Swiss franc.

In terms of Canadian funds, the U.S. dollar was up 7-100 at $1.1644 in Montreal trading at noon. Pound sterling was down 8 19-25 at $2.3288.

In New York, the Canadian dollar was down 1-20 at $0.8588 and pound sterling was down 7 13-20 at $2.0000.

Financial experts in all three European countries and on Wall Street heaped praise on the Carter announcement and a London dealer for the Chase Manhattan Bank said, "it's like a breath of fresh air" after months in which the dollar reached record lows on all major world money markets.

"This is the sort of action for which we've been waiting so long," one Zurich dealer said. "It should have come sooner."

Certain to set off another round of general increases in interest rates, the Federal Reserve Board boosted its lending rate by a full percentage point to a record 9.5 per cent.

These rises in American rates usually are followed by increases in Canadian rates since Canada must compete for investment funds in the American market.

The Carter government also announced $30 billion in proposed borrowings and currency-swap arrangements with the central banks of West Germany and Japan and the Swiss National Bank.

President Carter said the moves, which stunned international currency dealers, were necessary "to correct the excessive decline in the dollar which has recently occurred."

Canadian investment experts said the drastic American moves indicated the economic power still available to the United States "when pushed to the wall." High American interest rates may restrain American investments abroad, including Canada.

Carter said in a statement that the continuing decline in the U.S. dollar exchange rate was not warranted by the fundamental economic situation.

U.S. Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal told reporters that the U.S., West Germany and Japan will "intervene in a forceful and co-

Sun, Province Strikebound

VANCOUVER (CP) — Employees of Pacific Press Ltd. walked off the job and set up picket lines today after all-night talks failed to settle a contract dispute.

The walkout came a short time after talks broke off between the company and a joint council of its six unions.

Pacific Press prints The Province and The Vancouver Sun. Production of the afternoon Sun was halted by the walkout, although the morning Province was earlier distributed.

(The walkout came as Clark W. Davey of Toronto assumed the position of publisher of the Sun, replacing Stuart Keate who has retired. See story on page 12).

The guild and the Vancouver Printing Pressmen's Union, two of the six unions involved, were in a legal position to strike at midnight Tuesday when their contracts expired.

The company had served its 1,400 employees with a lockout notice also timed for midnight Tuesday.

Phil Needham, co-chairman of the joint council, said before the walkout that talks had stalled on key issues in the dispute and these were not being discussed.

Economic issues were also

THREE GRAIN ELEVATORS BURN DOWN

OLDS, Alta. (CP) — A spectacular fire burned out of control for about 4½ hours this morning, destroying three grain elevators and three recreational buildings.

RCMP say the fire was brought under control at about 9:30 a.m. after fire crews from Calgary, Red Deer and various surrounding communities came to the aid of the local volunteer fire department.

"They did a hell of job," said S.Sgt Earl Dungate of the Olds RCMP detachment.

NASH SALARY PROBE

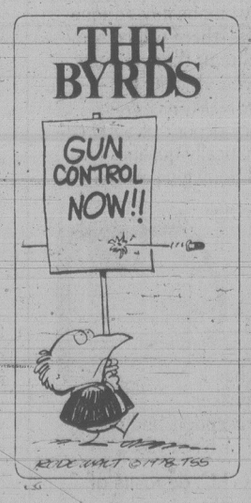

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative MP David MacDonald drew a government promise Tuesday to look into what he said appears to be an extraordinary salary and contract negotiated by Knowlton Nash as the new reader of CBC's nightly television news program, The National.

MacDonald (Egmont) referred in the Commons to published reports that Nash is to receive about $90,000 annually for five years.

MacDonald said Nash's previous salary as head of the Crown corporation's news and current affairs department was $45,000.

The Conservative MP, who shadows the operations of the secretary of state ministry, which is responsible to Parliament for the CBC, also said there is some question about possible violation of a collective bargaining agreement with CBC staff announcers.

Nash himself was involved in the negotiations, if not the decision, about the hiring of the new news reader to replace Peter Kent, McDonald said.

710 Miles of Tanzania Seized, Claims Amin

NAIROBI (UPI) — Uganda announced today that President Idi Amin's forces have captured 710 square miles of Tanzanian territory and Uganda has now annexed the northwestern tip of its East African neighbor.

In the first direct confirmation of the Ugandan attack, Radio Kampala said in a special announcement that the invasion was ordered by Amin and the nation's defence council as a "retaliatory" measure for a Tanzanian attack into southern Uganda.

The radio said the Ugandan forces have captured 710 square miles of Tanzanian territory west of Lake Victoria. It said the Tanzanians held 400 square miles of Ugandan soil.

Calling the attack "a record in world history," the broadcast said that the defence council decided that the new border between the two countries would be the Kagera river, giving the Ugandans a triangular slice of northwestern Tanzania.

Meanwhile, Amin said he wants peace, possibly with Cuban mediation.

Breaking its silence on the two days of fighting between the two east African neighbors, Radio Kampala said Amin had sent two appeals for peace to Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere, but received no reply.

Amin repeated his assertion that Tanzanian forces invaded Uganda five days ago.

Logging Ban Lifted In Tsitika Valley

The provincial government today lifted the five-year-old logging moratorium on the 100,000-acre Tsitika River valley on north eastern Vancouver Island.

Under the terms of the Tsitika Watershed Integrated Resource Plan approved by the cabinet's Environment and Land Use Committee (ELUC), 58,557 acres will be open to clearcut logging operations and additional acreage will be accessible through selective cutting.

The Tsitika planning committee report endorsed by ELUC states:

—Clearcut zones up to 600 acres in area should be allowed.

—Selective cutting should be permitted along water courses and in areas set aside for reereational value.

—Vital deer winter range should be identified and reserved from logging for a minimum of 150 years.

—The visual impact of logging be minimized by utilizing landscape logging techniques on those areas highly visible from the North Island Highway and Johnstone Strait.

—Logging companies should study alternatives to using the Tsitika estuary as a dumping ground. If alternatives are economically unfeasible further environmental impact studies should be undertaken.

The planning committee's final report has been rejected by the Federation of B.C. Naturalists and other environmental groups.

The federation represents 33 clubs in the province, 10 of which are on Vancouver Island.

David Orton, spokesman for the naturalists, described the Tsitika report as an Alice in Wonderland management plan.

"If they call that an integrated management plan, then God help the other resources of this province — water, fish, recreation and forest lands," he said.

"It's nothing but a good public relations job on the part of the forest industry."

Orton said that while the stand of his group is for the preservation of the Tsitika Valley, it also takes the position that if it is to be logged, then the logging methods used in the watershed should be of an entirely new type — fully protective of the forests, fisheries, wildlife, environmental and recreational interests.

"We are not opposed to logging, but we are opposed to logging this valley in the traditional manner," he said.

Basically the management plan endorses the traditional bare-land forestry practices of logging companies. It allows large clearcut zones on the steeply sloped valley.

"Large scale clearcuts up to 600 acres as proposed by the report will degrade and fundamentally change the environment to the detriment of fisheries and wildlife.

"The sick joke of this anyway is that 643 miles of roads are slated for construction

Big Lottery Win Saves Family Home

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Bragg were running out of cash and on the brink of selling the family home — but today they are $100,000 richer due to the Western Express lottery and they won't have to move after all.

Bragg, a 52-year-old electrician, has not worked for eight months due to a stroke and the family's savings were about gone.

There are five children, three still at home, and it seemed the family would have to take a small apartment somewhere.

But their lottery win has changed all that.

"There must be a God because this is a miracle," said Tim Bragg, 25, the eldest son, who is looking after the three youngest children today.

"Mom and dad were so happy about this — it was marvellous. It couldn't have come at a better time."

Mr. and Mrs. Bragg flew to Winnipeg to pick up the $100,000 cheque Monday and were on their way back to Victoria today.

It was the first trip for Bragg since his illness and it cheered him immensely, the family said.

The family's troubles began eight months ago when Bragg had a mild stroke while driving home from work and a minor car crash resulted.

He spent the night in hospital but the next day suffered a massive stroke. During tests that followed, blood clots and other problems were discovered and three months later he underwent a 7½-hour operation.

He has been recovering very slowly.

He was released from hospital three weeks ago and was depressed about the family's dwindling financial reserves. Mrs. Bragg, who has been a part-time clerk, was considering retraining for a full-time job to support the family.

There was the question of whether they could afford to keep the house.

Then on Wednesday Mrs. Bragg watched the Express lottery draw, writing down the winning numbers. It wasn't until several hours later that she checked her tickets and discovered she had won the top prize.

She phoned radio stations to try to get confirmation on the number and then spent a restless night waiting for the Winnipeg lottery office to open so she could phone and double-check the result.

She decided to fly to Winnipeg to give her husband his first trip in months.

Lottery spokesman Bill Weissmann said Mrs. Bragg kept saying how happy and relieved she was.

"She said this was the best therapy her husband could get. Now he has peace of mind and can concentrate on getting well again," Weissman said.

"He was very happy and very emotional about the win."

The couple lives at 1280 Balmoral Road.

CONTEMPT OF PARLIAMENT CHARGE IN OFFING?

CRTC Rep Lands in Hot Water

OTTAWA (CP) — Commons Speaker James Jerome said Tuesday a commissioner of the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC) may face contempt of Parliament charges for the "abusive" way he treated Liberal MP Simma Holt last week.

Jerome said Roy Faibish treated Mrs. Holt "in what was obviously a contemptuous and most abusive way" when she appeared at CRTC hearings in Vancouver Oct. 24.

Jerome reserved decision on whether the matter should be referred to a Commons committee.

Mrs. Holt (Vancouver-Kingsway) told the Commons she appeared before the commission at the request of constituents who were concerned about the deletion of American television stations from cable service.

She was distributing copies of her submission before testifying at a commission hearing, when commissioner Real Therrien asked her for a lapel button.

As she tried to pin the button — which read "CRTC out of BC" — on his jacket, Faibish grabbed her hand, flung the button across the room and yelled at her in "hysterical anger," Mrs. Holt said.

He told her several times to "shove the buttons up your —," Mrs. Holt said, omitting the last word. "But you know what I mean," she told MPs.

Despite a long career as a journalist covering the seamier side of life, "I was horrified."

"I think we should all be concerned that a bureaucrat would treat a member that way."

That point became the central issue of the Commons discussion, as Liberal and Conservative MPs supported Mrs. Holt.

Robert Muir (PC—Cape Breton-The Sydneys') said he was "fed up with some of the actions of the flunkies, lackies and pseudo-intellectuals who are appointed to these boards."

Mrs. Holt argued that Faibish's conduct was totally unacceptable.

"Even if he despises me, and obviously he does, it does not change the fact that he must respect the office I hold as a member of Parliament."

A "tyranny of bureaucracy" exists in this country because members of certain federally-appointed boards and Crown corporations are unable to contain their contempt for Parliament, Mrs. Holt said.

Jerome said ordinarily it would be impossible for him to rule that Mrs. Holt's rights as an MP had been infringed because the incident did not take place in Parliament.

However, the fact that Mr. Faibish was a member of a federal commission might change that and his "distasteful" behavior might amount to contempt of Parliament, Jerome said.

Jerome also suggested that the people responsible for Faibish's appointment might want to consider disciplinary action or dismissal.

IN TRANSIT CARR MOVES THIEF, TOO

VANCOUVER (CP) — A city man made a bad move and lost seven paintings, including one by Emily Carr valued at $14,000, police said Tuesday.

William Kergin was moving Monday from Kitsilano to the West End when the theft occurred, police said.

He left seven of his paintings, valued at $17,000, in the lobby of the West End building while he took other belongings up to his suite.

When he returned for the remaining paintings, they were gone.

Sentencing On Nov. 23

A Saanich man was convicted by a county court jury Tuesday of possessing stolen property but a recommendation for leniency was entered.

James Arthur Hannah will be sentenced by Judge Montague Drake Nov. 23 after a pre-sentence report is prepared.

Pedestrian Sideswiped

An 18-year-old girl narrowly escaped serious injury Tuesday night when struck by a car while walking on Blenkinsop Road near Mount Douglas Crossroad.

Saanich police said Janice April Radelja of 1681 Alderwood was walking with a companion at about 9 p.m. when she was hit by the car driven by Stephen John Kanhoffen, 18, of 3720 Savannah.

Kanhoffen told police he saw the pair, who were in dark clothes, and in swerving to miss them sideswiped the Radelja girl.

She was treated at Royal Jubilee and released.

Iran Air Staff Walks Out As 'Solidarity' Gesture

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Employees of Iran's state-run airline walked off the job today, joining an estimated 40,000 oil workers whose strike shut down the nation's $20-billion-a-year petroleum industry.

Striking Iran Air employees announced they had stopped work to join an opposition-led "solidarity movement" against the government. Like the oil workers, they presented the airline with tough political demands, including an end to martial law in Tehran and 11 other cities.

The strike grounded Iran Air's domestic and international flights and affected service through Tehran by other carriers.

Newspapers put the number of dead in Tuesday's urban disturbances at 23 with scores others injured.

The oil workers' strike spread to refineries outside the southern oil region. About 600 workers of the Tabriz refinery in west Iran quit work to press political demands.

Another refinery at Shiraz also was shut down following a similar strike Tuesday, Iranian press reports said.

Prime Minister Jaafar Sharif-Emami condemned the oil workers' strike as "an act of treason".

Map valid until noon Thursday

A strong southwesterly flow of moist air brought rain and strong winds to northern Vancouver Island and the north coast and wet snow to central interior regions this morning. Meanwhile, a dominant ridge of high pressure will continue the fine weather pattern on the south coast and southern interior with only patchy high clouds over these regions. A gradual change is taking place, however, as the ridge moves eastward into Alberta. This will allow the broad frontal band of cloud and rain from the northern areas to spread slowly to the south coast and Cariboo regions on Thursday afternoon. Only the Thompson, Okanagan and Kootenay regions can expect sunny skies on Thursday.

Rhodesia Goes On War Footing

MASS DESTRUCTION OF PETS SLATED

SALISBURY (UPI) — Plans have been drawn up for mass destruction of household pets throughout the country if whites continue to flee Rhodesia to escape the ongoing war with black guerrillas.

"We will not permit a situation to develop here that occurred in Mozambique and Angola when tens of thousands fled at independence, leaving their pets to starve," said Mrs. Trish Allison, secretary of the Rhodesian Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

"There would be no question of us leaving animals in kennels and pushing off," she added. "We would ensure that they were destroyed first."

The government reported that 1,776 whites left Rhodesia in September, a record number.

SALISBURY (UPI) — Prime Minister Ian Smith's government has placed more than half of Rhodesia under martial law in an attempt to check a spreading guerrilla war.

A special government gazette Tuesday placed 30 more predominantly black areas in the west, southwest, south and north under martial law in addition to regions already under the same restrictions.

The first martial law districts were created in September, but the latest government decision expands the total area under martial law to more than one half the country's land area.

Establishment of the areas allows the army to operate with more freedom. It bars blacks from leaving their villages after dark and allows troops to shoot at anything that moves during curfew hours.

In the latest fighting, a government communique said 11 black civilians were killed and 13 wounded in crossfire between troops and insurgents in the Bindura martial law area in northeast Rhodesia.

The incident occurred Monday night when 11 terrorists entered a compound, demanded food and then opened fire on a group of farm laborers when the food offered was insufficient, the report said.

"A security force unit, in ambush nearby, believing it had come under attack, returned the fire," the communique said. "Two terrorists and 11 locals died in the crossfire."

Civilians have often been caught in the middle in clashes between troops and insurgents and many of the estimated 14,000 people killed in the six-year war have been civilians.

The government's decision to expand the martial law zones comes against a backdrop of steadily escalating military activity, particularly along the Zambian border.

The Salisbury government announced Monday its troops had destroyed a Zambian military outpost because of mortar, rocket, heavy machine gun and small arms fire directed against a Rhodesian outpost near the border.

'One Million Face Death' From Hunger

WASHINGTON (AP) — A prominent Rhodesian critic of Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith said Tuesday at least one million people face imminent starvation in Rhodesia unless ways are found to provide food to contested areas of the country.

John Deary, white chairman of the Catholic Commission for Justice and Peace in Rhodesia, also said he believes, but cannot prove, that "private armies" backed by two of the white prime minister's black colleagues are masquerading as anti-government black nationalist guerrillas in terrorist raids on rural areas.

Deary, one of four commission members arrested by the Smith regime last year for their activities, made his assertions at a news conference here. He wanted to discuss the recent visit to the United States of Smith and his three black colleagues in a proposed "internal settlement" designed to establish black-majority rule in the African country.

He said the "residue" of the last crop of maize — the staple which is the diet mainstay in rural Rhodesia — was nearly exhausted and it will be three to four months before the first of the next crop comes available.

Deary said Rhodesian officials are not eager to distribute food in areas contested or controlled by the Patriotic Front because "if you feed the local population, you feed the guerrillas. Strategically, that makes no sense."

SPILL TANKER SCUTTLED

LONDON (AP) — A Greek tanker that went aground and spilled some of its 30,000 tons of oil on the Welsh coast was scuttled in the Atlantic Tuesday, the department of trade reported.

A department spokesman said that when the 58,829-deadweight-ton Christos Bitas was sunk it still contained about 1,000 tons of oil that could not be removed easily because of technical problems. It went down in water 5.3 kilometres deep 515 km west of the southwest tip of Ireland.

The decision to scuttle was taken after consultations between the British and Irish governments.

The Christos Bitas ran aground Oct. 12 on rocks off Milford Haven, Wales, on a voyage from Rotterdam, Holland, to Belfast, Northern Ireland. It spilled an estimated 2,700 tons of Iranian crude oil into the Irish Sea and fouled a 160-km stretch of the Welsh coast. Pumping of a further 26,300 tons of oil into the British tanker British Dragoon was completed Oct. 22

CARTER SNUBS BEGIN

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The Carter administration is showing a calculated cold shoulder to Israel, even as talks on an Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty continue to show progress.

The White House said Tuesday that President Carter will not meet with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin this week, although both will be in New York Thursday.

White House press secretary Jody Powell denied reports that Begin had been invited to meet with Carter in Washington during the weekend.

"The question is not why aren't they meeting, but why should they meet," Powell said.

Peace conference spokesman George Sherman, meanwhile, continued to report progress in the effort to settle remaining differences in the draft peace treaty.

Meanwhile in Baghdad, Arab leaders Tuesday completed a draft plan for a major offensive against Egyptian-Israeli peace moves, informed diplomatic sources said.

The sources said a six-man committee appointed by a meeting of foreign ministers and officials from 20 states and the Palestine Liberation Organization has drawn up guidelines for political, military and economic action.

The ministers were expected to approve the recommendations at a final session today.

Shootout At Dutch Border

THE HAGUE (AP) — An unidentified man and his female companion sprayed Dutch border police with gunfire today, killing one guard and seriously wounding a second, Dutch radio reported.

The shooting occurred at Kerkrade, on the Dutch-West German border in the southeast Netherlands, the radio report said. The couple was apparently trying to cross into West Germany.

The radio report quoted police sources as saying a major search was underway for the couple, who got away by car after the shootout.

Ungrateful, Car Consumer Man Told

WASHINGTON (CP) — Consumer protection advocate Phil Edmonston got a rough ride Tuesday when he tried to bring his campaign against premature auto rusting to the United States.

Edmonston, head of the Montreal-based Automobile Protection Association, was accused of "crass ingratitude" for maligning auto producers during a meeting of The Office of Technology Assessment — a Congressional study group which considers possible areas for legislative action.

He was accused of spreading innuendos about the auto companies without having facts to back them up and told he was ungrateful to the auto companies for their contribution to democracy by making cars available to almost everyone.

In an address to the meeting, which included government and industry members, Edmonton said the auto industry is making cars with "bio-degradable" bodies designed to rust early. He also noted that largely through his group's efforts, Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. agreed to institute a three-year warranty against rust perforations.

Don Murphy, representing the federal consumer and corporate affairs department, also noted the Ford warranty and added that Ford does not offer the same warranty in the United States.

Murphy said the Canadian government has successfully worked with the auto companies to implement a voluntary code establishing minimum levels of corrosion protection for automobiles.

Joe Clark's Opportunism

There is the ring of truth to suggestions that Conservative leader Joe Clark is opportunistically making up policy in order to secure votes for his drive toward the prime minister's office. Specifically, the Tory leader said in an interview this week he backs abolishing the right to strike in the public service in favor of an arbitration panel empowered to settle labor conflicts. Clark's timing, and the fact that his statement contradicts party policy, makes the motives behind his words a little suspect.

On the same day Clark was expressing his views to a Montreal interviewer, his party's labor critic was saying the Conservatives would never ban strikes in the public service because the action would create an "unholy row" throughout the labor movement. Although a public relations aide has since tried to backpeddle for the Conservative leader, it seems clear that Clark has suddenly decided to change party policy, is making a gauche attempt to win votes at the expense of government employees or simply jammed his foot in his mouth.

The first possibility is unlikely. Joe Clark is as shrewd as Tory labor critic John Fraser, who knows that no matter how politically popular such a decision might be, removing the right to strike would probably prove administratively impossible. The third possibility is also improbable. A politician as close to power as everyone seems to believe Clark is does not make offhand remarks of such importance to news reporters.

Fraser's claim that the Conservative leader's words were "mistranslated" is a little too ingenuous as an explanation; the public's perception is rather different. We are left with the conclusion that Clark deliberately suggested eliminating the right to strike because he thought it would increase his popularity. Considering the recent postal strike and the ongoing public distaste for public service walkouts, he may well have been right.

But political expedience does not excuse this kind of casual opportunism in someone who seeks to lead the country. If Conservative party policy calls for the end to the right to strike in the public service, let Clark say so loud and clear so everyone can know where he stands. If it does not, let him make that clear, too. There is no room for fence-sitting on such an important issue.

". . . Jessica, these are tortuous times we're living in . . . we're all going to have to do our part to turn the old economy around and I know we can count on you . . . I'm going to give you $500 . . . I want you to get out there and spend it . . . okay? . . . "

Shooting the Messenger

It is not difficult to see where a recent suggestion on curbing school vandalism in Courtenay is leading and it is more than a little perturbing. School board chairman Stan Hagen says he has asked the RCMP to put a news blackout on vandalism incidents and refuse to answer reporters' questions when the subject comes up. Although he had no figures to back up his thesis, Hagen maintained that reporting vandalism cases causes them to increase.

This sounds a little like shooting the messenger. It is hard to believe that informing the public of a crime induces others to commit similar offences. If this were the case, why would Canadian industry spend so much money and effort publicizing the shoplifting menace? Or why would the Employment and Immigration Commission spend so much time making people aware of unemployment insurance fraud?

Crime of any sort cannot be swept under the rug with the assumption that the public will take a "see no evil, hear no evil, do no evil" position. And the rights of the press to keep the public informed cannot be curbed on the basis of any assumption by anybody, let alone a small town school trustee. Hagen may believe reporting the news is asking for trouble. Not reporting it leads us down the road to even greater trouble.

Money Talk

I take up pen in hand for the unfamiliar task of writing to the editor. Recent political announcements, like Joe Clark's proposal to allow tax write-offs for mortgage interest for the middle class taxpayer, the so-called blue collar worker, have brought this reaction. Not only should this be allowed, but also a write-off against municipal taxes, especially since 40 cents of every dollar earned is spent by governments of one stripe or another.

Trudeau has stated that Clark's proposal would only benefit the rich. He has conveniently overlooked the fact that since 1972, salary earners in the $30,000 bracket and up have been able to invest in apartments, duplexes and condominiums where they are allowed a capital cost allowance of 10 per cent to be written off against other income, plus the usual depreciation, land taxes and other expenses.

One other point, regarding Saanich municipal council salary increases: if they are in it for the money, too bad. Nobody asked them to run for office. Tying their salary to a per capita basis is a neat way of showing how little it costs to be governed by these people. However, a fairer way for the taxpayer would be to pay a percentage of the budget as a cost of government just like any other civic employees' wage estimates.

How do elected officials expect civic workers to show restraint in their wage demands when they grant themselves a 12 per cent increase? — C. Shergold, 1688 San Juan Avenue.

Misleading Picture

I have recently seen a number of letters to the editor in which Mr. Small is being taken to task for his derogatory comments about the city of Halifax, your sister city on the east coast.

However, I notice that your paper perhaps added insult to injury by placing a photograph of a slum area in Halifax adjacent to the letters. The fact that the slum area no longer exists and has been replaced by a modern housing development is fairly significant.

Perhaps your editorial position is taking sides with the unfortunate and inaccurate remarks of your own chamber of commerce manager. I should hope not. I think that your paper has a broader concept of the relative values of the towns and cities across Canada than Mr. Small. — David B. Webster, Collins' Bank, Historic Properties, Halifax.

Why More Jails?

The solicitor-general of Canada wants to build 24 more federal prisons within the next five years. This means over 5,000 new cells costing some $80,000 each. Why? On Nov. 1, 1977, federal prisons had 1,867 empty beds, and already since 1970 the Canadian penitentiary service budget has risen from $70 million to $256 million with no decrease in crime.

In addition, it costs around $25,000 a year to keep a man in jail, while his family must usually go on welfare. But the Moratorium Committee on Prison Construction points out that practical alternatives exist: "More than 80 per cent of people arrested for nonviolent crime could have their cases dealt with through restitution, community service or similar plans. This would free ample amounts of money and resources to provide treatment for the very few dangerous offenders."

The committee stresses besides the matter of solitary confinement. Margo Lamont describes solitary in the September, 1978 issue of The Last Post: "People are held completely alone in concrete cells 10 feet by six feet, with solid steel doors that have peepholes which can be opened only from the outside. No windows. A continuously burning electric bulb. Poor ventilation — freezing in winter, stifling in summer. Sleeping on a foam mattress over a concrete slab, their heads only inches from an open toilet bowl."

"In these places," writes Gerald McNeil in Cruel and Unusual, "men often die. They commit suicide. They have heart attacks or strokes at unusually young ages."

"Society," says the subcommittee on penitentiaries in its recent report to Parliament, "has spent millions of dollars over the years to create and maintain the proven failure of prisons."

So what of the $500 million that the solicitor-general wants for 20-odd more prisons? Responsibe citizens should tell him. — Frances Wilcox, Abbotsford, B.C.

It's a Good Thing

While thumbing through the new Friendship Book for 1979 by Francis Gay for daily readings my eyes caught the following "thought for the day." There is so much greed and so little compassion in the world today and in view of the many strikes and inconveniences felt this a very appropriate time to pass this along.

"It's a good thing God above has never gone on strike because he wasn't treated fair on things he didn't like. If he had ever once sat down and said: 'That's it, I'm through. I've had enough of those on earth — so this is what I'll do. I'll give my orders to the sun, cut off your heat supply, and to the moon give no more light, and run the oceans dry. Then just to make it really tough and put the pressure on — turn off the air and oxygen 'till every breath is gone. Men say they want a better deal and so on strike they go. But what a deal we've given God, to whom the world we owe! We don't much care whom we hurt to gain the things we like. But what a mess we'd all be in if God should go on strike'." End of quote. — Mrs. W. Holmes, 1035 Pendergast Street.

A Right, Not Charity

In this day and age one would assume that part of the taxes we pay are towards the insurance payment, so in case we or any of our family gets invalid or is unable to work for any valid reason, we are well looked after. Help for our senior citizens (who have worked hard to build this beautiful country and have made life so easy for us) or disabled folks should and must be treated like any other insurance claims, not as welfare or charity.

It is absurd and ridiculous that we should unnecessarily make them feel that they are living on welfare and charity, or are a burden on the society, when all they are getting is their legitimate insurance claims. They indeed deserve a far better deal than they presently get, to lead a decent life with pride and dignity.

Emulating Ottawa

The federal government is often justifiably criticized for being arrogant and having insufficient policy consultations with the provinces. Sadly, B.C., with its constitutional reform package, is emulating this unfortunate example. As you noted in your editorial of Oct. 19, (Ringing the Changes) B.C. "diplomatically ignored the implications for the rest of Canada" when it put forward its perennial plan to create five super provinces by lumping the maritimes into the region, the prairies into another and wiping the Yukon and the Northwest Territories off the map by extending the northern boundaries of B.C., Ontario, Quebec and the Prairies to the Arctic Ocean.

The imperialistic impertinence! It's no wonder that this country is afflicted with one crisis of national unity after another when various jurisdictions are scheming to aggrandize themselves at the expense of other jurisdictions. — Patrick Wolfe, 521 Laren Road.

STUART UNDERHILL

Teacup War and How It Ended

"This is absolutely bloody outrageous," declared Aunt Margaret, unpinning her broad-brimmed straw hat and skimming it toward a chair in the corner of the room.

Uncle Billy and I were used to Aunt Margaret's occasional "cussing moods" but her behavior was so violent that we lost the thread of our chess game and stared at her in amazement.

"Etta!" Aunt Margaret exclaimed wrathfully. "My own sister. To think that she . . . " She looked around, as if searching for something to break.

Uncle Billy's glance informed me the chess game was suspended. "Come on now, old girl," he said. "Tell us all about it. Perhaps you'd like some tea?"

"I've had tea," she snapped. Then she grew calmer and, lowering herself into a chair, proceeded to explain the infamy of her sister Etta.

Of my three great-aunts in Victoria, Etta was the most active socially, as became the widow of a man who had been a prominent local figure. She had a big house on the Gorge with tennis courts and croquet lawns as well as spacious reception rooms, and what was the point of it all if they weren't being used by guests?

Rarely Attended

On the whole her two sisters tolerated her activities. Aunt Margaret rarely went to her parties; Uncle Billy's supposedly delicate health restricted his socializing. Sometimes Aunt Blanche went and sometimes she didn't, depending on the mood of her eccentric Irish husband.

Aunt Margaret didn't often leave Uncle Billy but today was an exception, perhaps because I was there to amuse him. She had gone to tea at Aunt Blanche's. It was part of a plan to return the hospitality of old friends who had been specially kind to the two sisters. Blanche was giving them tea, in the course of which Margaret would invite them all to lunch the following Saturday week.

Her pince nez glittered as her tale approached its climax. Imagine her consternation (she said) when her invitation stilled the rattle of teacups and halted the circulation of the hot buttered scones.

Miss Lottie Work broke the silence. She couldn't come, she said, because she was going to Etta Crow-Baker's buffet luncheon at Sissinghurst. Her tennis-playing days were over but she enjoyed watching the youngsters and was staying for that purpose through the afternoon. Nodding heads indicated that the others in the room had similar plans.

"Imagine!" said Aunt Margaret, the tip of her nose pink with rage. "Finding out about it like that. Asking everyone to lunch on my Saturday and never a word to me."

Tea party at Government House, the last in the grand style.

I added a pinch of salt to her wound. "That's the weekend Mother and Dad are coming to stay with you, because of the school sports day."

Aunt Margaret looked stunned. "So they are," she said. "Well, they shan't go to Etta's party."

We all jumped when the telephone rang in the next room. Uncle Billy and I eavesdropped unashamedly. My great-aunt listened to a long monologue by her caller and then said: "I know." There was another long silence and then she said: "I'll see."

"That was Etta," she said coldly when she came back. "Very graciously asking us to her luncheon. A buffet on the lawn, unless it rains. I hate buffets. And oh yes, she wants Wing to make some of his turbans." (That was what we children called the delicious meringue cookies her Chinese cook was renowned for.)

Having let this sink in she sighed. "It's really getting to be too much for me. I am going to my room to lie down."

Now it was Uncle Billy's turn to sigh. He hated dissension, perhaps because he had encountered overmuch in his days as a county court judge.

"Your move," he said, nodding at the board.

I might be able to set the chess men in play but I knew that coming events would be determined by adults and not by a 13-year-old boy. As soon as I was back at the school where I boarded the problem was erased from my mind.

Sports Day was on a Friday, the day before Aunt Etta's infamous party. Mother and Dad were there, having come over from Vancouver on the steamer the day before and lodged themselves with Aunt Margaret.

The sun shone and the green playing-fields were alive with boys big and little, fat and skinny, dressed in white shorts and singlets and capering through their athletic endeavors. My parents saw me eliminated from the first heat of one race and run next to last in the final of another. They didn't seem to mind so neither did I.

Tea was served in a marquee where long-suffering masters made polite conversation with parents who were on their best behavior. From this we were rescued by Aunt Margaret, who drove us off to her house on Craigdarroch Road where I was to spend the weekend.

Chatting idly with Mother before dinner, I somehow let drop the matter of Aunt Etta's party. Mother perked up and wanted more details. I gave her a lurid account of the feud between the two sisters.

"Oh dear," she said. "I've known them to be cross at one another but never anything like this. What a shame. I love going to Sissinghurst, especially when there's a party."

Aunt Margaret herself broached the subject that night at dinner as we were finishing our dessert.

"I must tell you about poor Etta," she began. "She's gone mad, quite mad." She thereupon unfolded an account of the squabble that was even more lurid than mine.

"What do you make of it, Harold?" she demanded, fixing her eagle gaze on my saintly father, whose eyes were downcast on his plate. He shook his head from side to side, a gesture which could have meant anything. Like Uncle Billy, he was a peace-lover.

"Helena?" barked Aunt Margaret, turning to Mother with an air that said she should have known a man would be incapable of comprehending the situation.

Mother sat up very straight. Her hands were folded in her lap and her cheeks were scarlet. "I think you're both being very silly," she said. "I think we should all go to Aunt Etta's party."

I waited for Aunt Margaret to produce a scimitar and slice off Mother's head. She might have done too, if it hadn't been for Uncle Billy.

Uncle Billy had an infectious laugh which no one could resist. He began by shaking like a jelly, his face getting redder and redder. Then as the tears began to shine on his cheeks he loosed giggle after giggle: tee-hee, tee-hee-hee.

I saw my father's pointed white beard begin to quiver and soon he was chuckling and before many seconds passed we were all at it, rocking in our chairs and gasping for breath as worry and frustration evaporated in healing laughter.

Some sanity was restored by the entrance of Annie the maid who regarded us sternly as she arranged the coffee things on the sideboard.

"Oh my," said Aunt Margaret. "I don't know when I've laughed so hard. Annie, please ask Wing to step in. He'll have to stay up late tonight. I want him to make dozens and dozens of turbans."

Annie bent and whispered something. It seemed that Wing was doing the laundry, which meant that he was sitting in the kitchen with his feet in a tub of sudsy water, trampling on the sheets and pillow-cases.

Patched Up

"I shall go to him then," said Aunt Margaret.

That explains the cavalcade that set out next day at noon from Craigdarroch Road. Aunt Margaret's Packard led the way with me sitting in front with her and Wing in the back seat, almost lost under a huge box, beside a well-wrapped Uncle Billy.

Behind us were two ancient black limousines which would have looked at home in a funeral procession. They bore Aunt Blanche and Uncle Burke, my parents, and the Arbuthnots, an elderly couple who had been invited to Aunt Margaret's in place of her lost guests and now found that they were lunching elsewhere.

Aunt Etta was receiving at the door of her pink brick mansion when the wheels of our cars crunched up the gravel driveway. She peered at us short-sightedly as we alighted. Then her face, for a moment glassy, broke into a thousand mirthful fragments.

"Here they are," she cried in a voice that boomed over the gardens. "Here they are. My dear, dear family." And one by one she kissed us tenderly.

(The election last month of Polish Cardinal Wojtyla as Pope John Paul II has focussed attention on the state of religion in the Communist bloc countries. This report on the Soviet Union by Le Monde's religion correspondent was written before the pope's election)

LISI-NOSS — In this harming little seaside resort near Leningrad, the Sunday morning service is follwed by a ceremonious procession round its delightful little wooden church, painted green and topped with blue domes. Outside the fence a group of city-dwellers on holiday stand watching in intrigued silence.

I was invited by the priest, Father Oleg Bekarevitch, to join him and his family for lunch. He explained proudly that one of his daughters, Lydia, had come top of the class in her last year of college, before becoming a railway engineer: "At the prizegiving, I went to the rostrum and gave a little sermon," Father Bekarevitch said with a laugh. "And my wife, who keeps the parish accounts, is also secretary of the parents' committee at the state school."

Millions

When I described this scene to someone very familiar with religious [illegible] the USSR, who [illegible] in Paris, he [illegible] knowing [illegible] showed [illegible] a model [illegible] are al[illegible] it."

When investigating the state of religion in the Soviet Union, you have to read carefully between the lines. A member of the patriarchate may state that the official Church knows no Christian dissidents, then add ingenuously: "At an individual level, of course, we have to give humanitarian aid to those who suffer." A bishop may remark that lessons on the history of the constitution have to be given in seminaries, but go on to say that the curriculum is "too full for there to be time for any critical examination of Marxist philosophy."

Patriarch Pimen himself recently stated that the number of parishes or churches may diminish in this or that diocese "when congregations decrease," having expressed satisfaction in the number of faithful, who now run to millions.

I saw full churches on Sundays and even during the week. The patriarchate admits in private, while pointing out that the Church keeps no kind of statistical record, that out of a population of 180 million with a Russian Orthodox background there are about 60 million regular or occasional churchgoers. Other more cautious estimates put the figure at between 30 and 50 million, or more than 20 per cent, which, if true, would be much lighter than the number of churchgoers in France.

Whatever the truth, there are too few churches for the number of believers. Although no accurate figures are published, it is estimated that between 5,000 and 7,000 Orthodox churches are open in the Soviet Union, as compared with 54,174 before the Revolution.

The Church has had its ups and downs. Following an early wave of repression that almost toppled it — by 1939 there were no more than four diocesan bishops, a few hundred priests, and no monastery or seminary — the war brought some liberalization: Stalin reopened many churches and monasteries in thanks for the patriotism of the Church, which collected enough money to finance the Alexander Nevsky squadron and the Dimitri Donskoi tank column.

A new clamp-down came in the '60's, when Nikita Khrushchev closed about 10,000 churches and cut the number of monasteries from 67 to 30. The Russian Orthodox Church still lives a precarious existence today. There are 76 bishops and about 15,000 priests. The two academies of higher theology and the three seminaries now open total only 1,617 students between them. There is keen competition for the few places available.

Ninety-eight per cent of all students are ordaind, and 90 per cent of those get married beforehand. In the Orthodox Church, only monks (who are celibate) can become bishops. But this practice, which discriminates against the married clergy in favor of the celibate hierarchy, is now beginning to be questioned.

Hierarchy

Some prelates climb the rungs of the hierarchy very fast. One such man is Metropolitan Kirill, who became archbishop of Vyborg at 31.

"When I studied the Vatican II documents," he told me, "I was reminded of some of these reforms. Two tendencies are now emerging in our church: one which wants to perpetuate the traditions of the old St. Petersburg school of theology, and the other which wishes to bring in legitimate reforms."

Certain dissident Christians belong to the first tendency, like Father Dimitri Dudko, who was dismissed from his post as priest at St. Nicholas's in Moscow because he replaced the traditional sermon by a question-and-answer session. He has made no bones of the fact that he does not favor Church Slavonic being superseded by Russian in the liturgy. In this his attitude coincides with the Russophile tendency to which Alexander Solzhenitsyn belongs, and which holds the traditions of the Orthodox Church to be a sacrosanct treasure house of the Russian soul and culture.

Some Soviet party leaders favor this tendency, even though it is a heresy in the orthodox Marxist view. This explains "anomalies" like the conservation and restoration of old churches in northern towns, the encouragement of peasant folklore, often religious in origin, and the recent permission granted to the painter Ilya Glazunov to mount an official exhibition of his work, part of which has a religious theme.

The Russian Orthodox Church gives every sign of wealth, at least to the 500 or so foreign delegations who are put up each year in the best hotels and lavishly entertained. The Russians are famous for their hospitality, but one cannot help wondering where the Church, which is officially considered to be an anachronism and a parasite, gets hold of its money.

Priests earn between two and three times a worker's wage, and bishops twice that again. And there are many "fringe benefits"; but the clergy are regarded as independent workers and have to pay 48 per cent income tax. And when they retire, their pension is very small.

The Church, then, is relatively wealthy. But it cannot do what it likes with its money. It is not allowed to set up old people's homes, schools or hospitals (the prerogative of the State), but each parish has to pay a certain sum each to the Peace Fund, a State-run mutual aid scheme.

The Church has to account for all its expenditure to the State Committee for Religious Affairs. It may fail to obtain authorization to restore a crumbling country church or to install a heating system, but is permitted to receive foreign delegations in style. Similarly, the patriarchate can publish only the number of Bibles and magazines that its annual paper quota will allow.

Monasteries

But alongside what one of the people I met described as the "caviar episcopate," there exists another side to the Church that is humble, poor, close to the people, and given over to prayer. In Kiev I visited two women's monasteries, Pokrovsky, with 110 enclosed nuns, and Florovsky, the Ukraine's oldest convent, whose 100 or so nuns follow the ancient Rule of Constantinople that has not changed since the convent was founded 800 years ago: they rise at 2:30 a.m. and the services can last for up to 16 hours.

The churches I saw in the smaller parishes, especially in cities like Tashkent and Kagan in Central Asia, were remarkable in that their congregations (mostly women) consisted almost completely of people born after the Revolution. Young couples were having their children baptised. There was absolutely no doubting the faith of church-goers who answered the priest's words "Jesus Christ is risen again!" with a conviction that put the "secularized" Christians of Western churches to shame: "Yes, indeed he has risen again!"

In 1918, Lenin put all religion on an equal footing before the law, whereas the Orthodox Church had previously been predominant. The Muslims, along with some Protestant leaders, express constant gratitude to the Soviet system for having saved them from "Czarist persecution."

The religious leaders are considered useful by the Soviet government insofar as they sanction its policies and agree to act as unofficial "ambassadors" on the international scene. Several orthodox bishops, for example, hold important positions in international organizations.

They are extremely sensitive towards any criticism of the Soviet Union, and excessively docile vis-a-vis their own government's policies (such as the condemnation of the neutron bomb by a succession of Russian Orthodox priests at the Meeting of European Churches in Chantilly); but allowance has to be made for the small room for manoeuvre which they enjoy.

In their struggle for survival, religious confessions can choose between compromise or conflict; and they all have, among their ranks, advocates of either course.

Dimitri Dudko is the Moscow priest who attracted crowds to St. Nicholas church in Mocow with his sermon-cum-dialogues. As a result he was exiled 45 kilometres from the capital to the tiny parish of Grebnevo.

"If you agree to stick to the liturgical service," he says, "they leave you alone. But if you attempt to evangelize life outside the doors of the church, or to bring your faith in contact with contemporary problems like atheism, science or social life, then you're harrassed day and night, as I am. I was called before the State Committee for Religious Affairs. And I am constantly followed from my Moscow flat to my country parish."

There exists a clandestine Church, with its priests and several bishops. But Father Dudko prefers not to break off relations with the official Church, so he can ask his embarrassing questions in public, even if this means that his wife and children suffer.

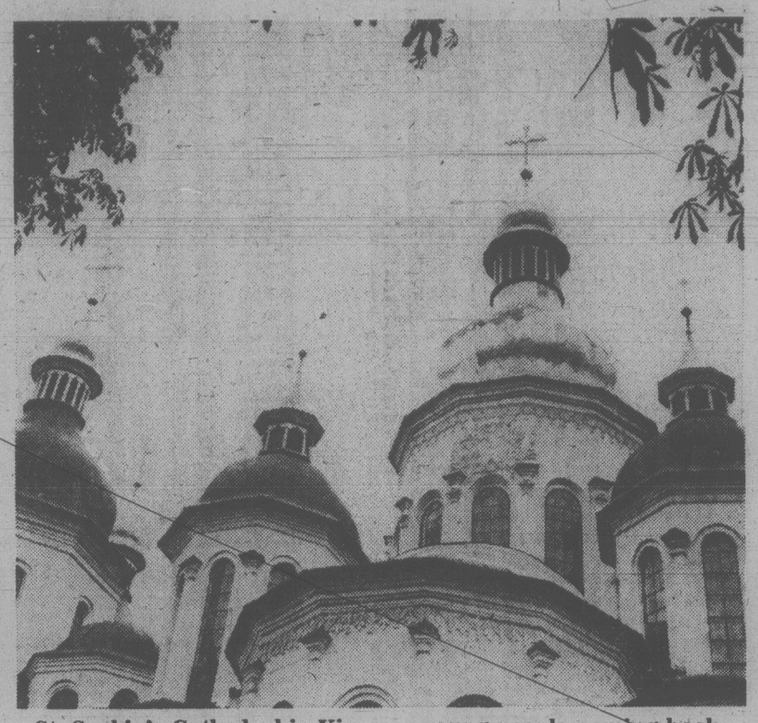

Chorister

Father Gleb Yakunin, on the other hand, occupies a more marginal position, as the patriarch forbade him to exercise his ministry after he had sent letters to the World Council of Churches in particular, denouncing religious persecution in the USSR. He now earns his living as a chorister in a Moscow church.

"The official Church," he says, "is completely under state control. The money given by church-goers, for example, is all paid into a state bank, and it's the State Committee that decides how it should be spent. The 1929 legislation on religious affairs is highly discriminatory, but it is above all the dissident Baptists who are being the most ruthlessly persecuted. Two thousand of them were arrested in Rostow last May."

The dissident priests are optimistic about the future. Father Dudko says lots of young people come to hear him and ask for their children to be baptised. According to Father Yakunim: "Time is working in our favor. There is no longer any hatred of religion, and I feel we are at the dawn of a new era: the process of resurrection of Russia has started — and it cannot be stopped!"

They both agree with the conclusions that Monsignor Etchegaray, archbishop of Marseille, drew from his trip to the Soviet Union in 1976: "No one suspects the scale and intensity of religious life in the USSR. It is without any doubt the biggest volcano in Christendom."

Nobody Wins Old-Fashioned Press Battle

By JAMES RESTON
New York Times

There is something inexpressably sad about a lifeless daily newspaper office. It is like an empty theatre with a dark and ghostly stage. This is the way it has been for many weeks at The Daily News and The Times in New York.

The causes of the strike between the pressmen and the publishers are not the point here. These issues have been debated at length elsewhere. The element of tragedy lies, not so much in a conflict of right and wrong, but in a conflict of rights, in their common concerns about the technological changes that are revolutionizing the world of communications.

For the pressmen, the invention of photocomposition and computerized high-speed presses is as much a threat as the automobile was to the livery stable, or the diesel locomotive was to the old coal-burning railroad engine with the third man in the cab. It is a struggle to preserve a world that is going, if not gone.

The pressmen are not so afraid of what is happening — for they have been offered in New York what they have already accepted elsewhere — but of what might happen as advanced technology reduces and eventually replaces their personal skills.

For the publishers, the problem is the opposite. For while the new printing revolution is the pressmen's nightmare, it is the publishers' main hope in their competition for readers and advertisers with network television, radio, cable television and — just beyond the horizon — world satellite television and the electronic transmission of printed news out the back of your television set.

So the pressmen and the publishers are living and negotiating under the dominion of fear. The printers and the other newspaper craft unions have compromised with the new technology. But the pressmen have been holding out, rejecting offers of a gradual adjustment by job security and attrition to inevitable change, and fearing they are being asked to negotiate their own obituaries.

The result of all this is an unhappy and even vicious confrontation between colleagues here at The Times on 43rd Street. We have worked together here, many of us for 40 years, but we are strangers, the men on the picket line condemning us as scabs and worse when we go through the door. Somehow, we cannot talk about our common problems.

Meanwhile, little if anything is said about the public interest in this great city that has been without its major newspapers for more than two months. In this time, life had gone on and many important things have happened.

The documents on the Middle East compromises have not been published in New York. China and Japan have concluded a treaty of friendship after four decades of contention and war. Two popes of the Roman Catholic Church have died and a third pope out of Poland — the first non-Italian in more than 400 years — has been elected without any complete record of his speeches being recorded so far on microfilm for the university libraries of the nation and the scholars of the world who depend on The Times for the texts of these historic documents.

Television is our eyes, but the newspapers are our memory. When the strike is over, all this will be recovered at great expense for the historical record, but it will not be the same thing.

For the reporters were not writing in New York during these days of remarkable events, though it meant so much to this community and to the libraries and scholars of the nation. Other reporters in other cities were keeping the facts, but much of the melody and opinion of the facts here have been lost and the papers are still dark — except, of course for Rupert Murdoch of The Post, who cheapens the tragedy and adds to the darkness.

What is particularly worrying is that in the last 114-day strike of the major newspapers in New York more than 800,000 newspaper readers never came back to buy or subscribe to any newspaper. They simply vanished, to the detriment of both publishers and pressmen, which is the point that has apparently been missed in the present strike. Namely, that the interests of both publishers and pressmen lie in compromise, for in conflict both stand to lose more than they or the city are likely to gain by this old-fashioned battle.

They Have Right to be Touchy

By RICHARD COHEN

Exactly who she was and where she came from and what she was doing in that apartment is something I do not know. I think she was a relative, a cousin, maybe, but she may not have been. I was a child and she came to a relative's house right after the war when waves of airplanes were returning from Europe, and one night, when they flew over, the lady cringed and grew white with fear.

She had to be told that they were our planes and the war, after all, was over. Nowadays she would be blamed for over-reacting.

It is hard to remember anything more than that. I remember a general sympathy for her, an understanding of what she had been through, a consensus among the adults that she would never be the same — whatever the same was. She had gone through a certain kind of experience and the experience had changed her, marked her, and she would look at things differently than we would. It was that simple.

I bring this up now because it is a lesson that once learned should not be forgotten. Only it is, and it is by me sometimes, and it happens when I write about blacks and women, and it happens to others when they deal with Jews or Poles or American Indians or whatever group has earned a right to be especially sensitive.

What happens is that you forget that some people have earned their way of looking at the world — earned it the hard way — and that they have a certain right to ask you to prove yourself.

When it comes to blacks, for instance, what you are getting now is the attitude that their gripes are not real or, even if they once were, they no longer are — that history has made it all passe, such a bore. It was the sort of thing you heard at the height of the frenzy over Bakke, when whites could not understand why blacks saw the suit as a threat. The snickers ignore the fact that this is exactly what happened in the U.S. time amd time again. In other words, when you are black, the word paranoia loses its meaning.

The same is true with Jews. We see, for example, the term "Holocaust complex" creeping into the language, applied with some frequency when it comes to Menachem Begin, the prime minister of Israel. What exactly the term means, I can't begin to explain except that it trivializes a horrendous and tragic period of history, making it sound almost as if it did not happen. You cannot, almost by definition, overreact to the Holocaust. This does not mean, though, that Begin is always right.

With Poles, something similar is at work. They are accused of not having a sense of humor when they fail to laugh at jokes that characterize them as stupid.

American Indians are considered a bit unreasonable in their demands, even though they have been sold down the river more times than there are rivers.

As for women, many of them are condemned for their single-minded insistence that the law be made to reflect the thinking of the 20th century and that their rights as people be respected.

In many respects, this is the tough one, and the reason I am writing this column, really, is that I recently wrote one about the Equal Rights Amendment — how it would be nice to have it and how it would clean up the law, but how it wouldn't make much of a difference one way or the other. There was, I think, a touch of condescension in all that, the notion that the fight, as I and other men had defined it, was over, and it was time for the zealots to retire from the field. The movement, knock on wood, had triumphed.

But having written that, I went off a couple of days later to a friend's house where there were three men and four women and where, after a while, an argument erupted over the progress women have made recently. The men took one side — the side of reason, we thought — and the women took the other side — the side of emotion — and we men were pretty secure in our argument until one of the women opened up.

She is a lawyer and she said simply that she did not want to hear how women are working their way up the ladder and that some day they will emerge as leaders, inheriting, if not the earth, then at least their half of it. She spoke instead of her fight for equal rights, equal treatment, equal opportunity, and how the brightest women of her college class went out into the real world and floundered, going nowhere. Maybe they typed or did research and many of them, of course, simply chucked the whole thing.

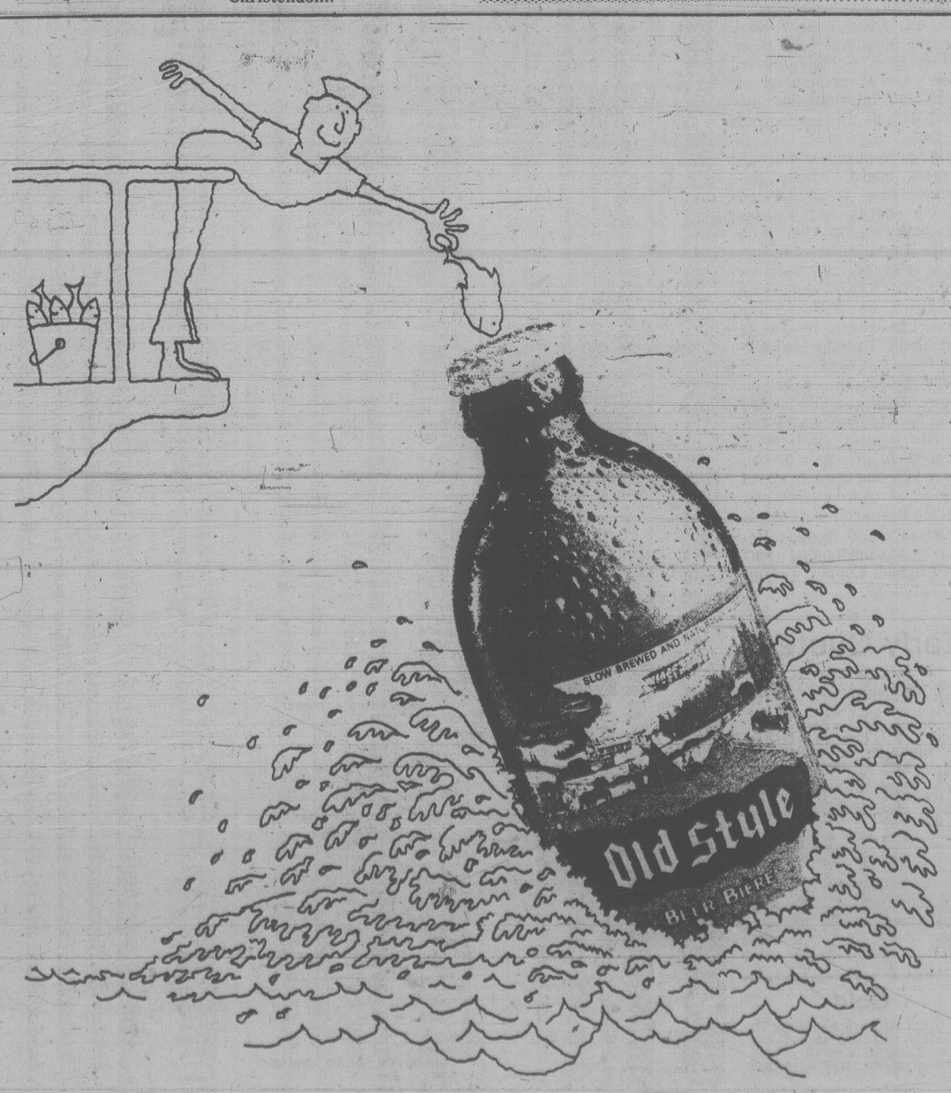

The same people who robbed these women of their futures are still around. You cannot blame women for asking for some constitutional protections.

The thing, of course, is that the lady was right and we men were wrong. We were doing what so many people do when they deal with certain groups — ask them to act in a manner that we would consider reasonable, but that would be unreasonable given their experiences.

It is a strange situation for these groups — guilty once, say, for being a woman and then guilty years later for reacting to this discrimination.

It's called double jeopardy and it's supposed to be unfair.

NEW DEADLINE

CASTLEGAR (CP) — City council decided Tuesday to continue to operate the Castlegar airport until March 31, 1979, after earlier threatening to close it Tuesday if the federal government did not produce liability guarantees.

The decision was made after the city received assurances from Transport Canada that Ottawa would immediately increase the city's liability protection to $20 million from $10 million until a more comprehensive policy is introduced later this month.

Concern about the city's liability arose following the crash last February of a Pacific Western Airlines plane in Cranbrook in which 43 persons were killed. The city of Cranbrook has been named in a series of lawsuits arising from that crash.

Tight Security for Socialist Elite

VANCOUVER (CP) — Inspiring the tightest security since the United Nations Habitat Conference two years ago, the list of delegates to attend the Socialist International congress here this week reads like a Who's Who of world socialism.

Leading the list is former West German chancellor Willy Brandt, elected president of the Socialist International at its last congress in Geneva in 1976. Brandt is to address delegates when the three-day conference opens Friday.

Also scheduled to attend the congress, the first held outside Western Europe, will be the prime ministers of Jamaica, Finland, Denmark and Senegal, Portuguese socialist leader Mario Soares, Shimon Peres of Israel's Labor Party and Francois Mitterand, first secretary of the French Socialist Party.

The Zimbabwe Patriotic Front, the Namibian South-West Africa People's Organization, FRELIMO from Mozambique and the Eritrean People's Liberation Front were also invited by the London-based group.

Two members of the Canadian contingent — Ed Broadbent, leader of the federal New Democratic Party, and Dave Barrett, former premier and NDP leader in British Columbia — will also address the congress Friday. The NDP's role as congress host accounts for its high profile.

Police are preparing their own strong contingent for the week's activities.

"I can't tell you how many men we're using or how much we're spending, but we're providing enough manpower to do the job adequately," said an RCMP spokesman. "There is involvement from city police as well, and a number of the VIPs will be bringing their own security people."

Security forces were not evident Tuesday as the International Conference of Social Democratic Women (ICSDW), the women's offshoot of the Socialist International, opened its two-day meeting. That conference, chaired by Belgium's Irene Petry, ICSDW president and vice-chairman of the Socialist International, chose as its theme Violence in Society.

Delegates spoke out against types of violence ranging from political oppression to economic violence perpetrated against the unemployed. They said socialist governments could control the social, economic and political policies that lead to frustration and violence.

The Socialist International congress, at which many of the women will be delegates, will deal with such topics as Southern Africa, disarmament, human rights and terrorism.

Opposition to terrorism, and to those who would fight it with violence, was expressed Tuesday at the women's conference, despite allusions to a statement by Karl Marx, the father of the movement, that "violence is the midwife of progress."

Bernt Carlsson, general secretary of the Socialist International, says that statement has been used by radical Marxist-Leninists to make violence the main instrument of change.

Social democrats, he said, prefer "socialism based on popular support."

The Socialist International, also known as the Second International, developed from the First International founded in 1864. It is distinct from the Third International formed by Lenin in 1919.

Stolen Lottery Tickets Valid

VANCOUVER (CP) — Holders of Western Express and Provincial lottery tickets stolen from the British Columbia Lottery office here can collect their winnings if their tickets are drawn, providing they had nothing to do with the theft, a lottery spokesman said Tuesday.

Bill Weissmann, assistant director for public relations and draws for the Western Canada Lottery Foundation, said traces have been put on the tickets and officials have a fairly good idea of the range of the numbers stolen.

He said officials were going through the ticket numbers recorded before the theft to determine which ones were missing.

The tickets, with a face value of $21,250, are for Wednesday Express draws today and Nov. 8 and for a Provincial draw on Nov. 6. The Provincial tickets are also valid for a draw held Sunday and may include winning tickets not yet claimed.

Weissmann said the numbers are drawn at random by means of lottery balls and no combinations could be taken out of the draws.

"The purchaser is protected in that every number is in the draw," he said.

If one of the stolen tickets wins and a prize is claimed, the holder can win, but would have to be questioned on how and where he bought the ticket.

"However, if the culprit tries to collect, he is going to get a prize in jail," he said.

Fisheries Program Nearly Set

OTTAWA (CP) — Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc said Tuesday a fisheries enhancement program is almost ready for signing by the British Columbia and federal governments.

The minister told Benno Friesen (PC-Surry-White Rock) in the Commons the justice department is looking at the fine print, checking the legal language.

He said the agreement could have been ready before now but the provincial government was slow to define its position.

Friesen had asked why the minister had not been in B.C. earlier this month for a ceremonial launching of the program.

Canfarm Subsidy Faces Cut

Ottawa is considering a proposal which would halve its $6 million subsidy to Canfarm but would keep the program in operation, Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt said Tuesday.

Hewitt said the provincial governments, which provide $6 million to the computer accounting service for farmers, would continue their support.

The minister said the proposal was made at a meeting of deputy agriculture ministers held to discuss the federal government's proposals to cut back spending in agriculture by $68 million.

"It's a farm-reporting, a management tool that farmers can use by getting statistical analysis from the computer set-up," he said. "We feel it's worthwhile and we wouldn't want to see it dropped."

Newsprint Production Runs 97%

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada's newsprint mills ran at 97 per cent capacity to produce 759,000 short tons during September, 1978, or 46,000 short tons more than the same month last year, the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association says.

Shipments during the month totalled 770,000 short tons, of which 550,000 were exported to the United States.

For the first nine months of this year, 7.308 million short tons were produced, 10.5 per cent more than the same period last year. Total shipments were 7.298 million short tons, an increase pf 12.2 per cent.

over the 80-year Tsitika cutting rotation," he said.

Orton said another reason for not supporting the plan is that naturalist clubs had little or no input in the management plan.

"Furthermore, the report shows it is not an integrated resource management plan, but the domination of one resource, industrial forestry, over all others," he said.

Bob Nixon, representing the Western Chapter of the Sierra Club, said he is deeply concerned with several aspects of the report.

"The report fails to consider many basic resource questions. If it stands without full public debate, we may as well have not passed new forest legislation."

Scotty Neish, representing the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union on the committee, has also dissociated himself from the report, and is expected to submit a minority report within the next few days.

Daryll Hebert, regional biologist for the Fish and Wildlife branch on Vancouver Island, said he was generally pleased with the final report.

Hebert was strongly opposed to early plans which he said would decimate deer herds in the valley.

Originally the planning committee had recommended that vital deer winter habitat be protected for only 80 years — in the final draft that protection has been extended to a minimum of 150 years.

Wallace Resigning At UVic

University of Victoria's chancellor Dr. Robert Wallace is resigning at the end of the year after two terms of office.

Under terms of the Universities Act the former UVic professor, who retired in 1971, is eligible for a third term as chancellor. But he decided to resign after serving six years to give someone else a chance at the office.

Nominations for a new chancellor close today. There are more than 10,000 eligible voters, including all UVic graduates.

Wallace's association with UVic goes back to 1924 when he attended Victoria College, then located in Craigdarroch Castle.

During a 38-year career at UVic he has been dean of administration and fine arts, head of the mathematics department and acting president.

After he retired, Wallace was awarded the title and degree of Doctor of Laws.

Blast Kills 9

BUCHAREST (AP) — An explosion at Romania's Pitesti oil refinery Tuesday night killed nine workers, the news agency Agerpres reported. It said others were injured in the blast and fire which followed. The report gave no damage estimate.

AND THAT'S the spigot, 10-year-old Dennis Rodgers (left) of Vankleek Hill, Ont., seems to be telling his friend, John Beerwort of Montreal, at display of dairy cattle during food and agriculture show at Montreal's Olympic site.

Boy Stabbed Over 'Treats'

WINNIPEG (CP) — An 13-year-old boy was stabbed in the chest Tuesday night as he crossed a school ground in northeast Winnipeg.

Police said two men approached the boy and demanded he hand over his Halloween treats. When he refused, one of the two men stabbed the boy with a knife. The boy was treated and released from hospital.

The incident was the most serious in a relatively quiet evening for police in Winnipeg and other Manitoba centres.

Other incidents in Winnipeg included egg-throwing and window-smashing. Police said there were also reports of at least two apples with foreign objects inside being found in Halloween bags.

Toxic Chemical Use Opposed

The Sierra Club has requested permission to appeal a decision of Environment Minister Jim Nielsen allowing the B.C. Forest Service to use a toxic chemical to kill vegetation on 60 acres of land at Williams Lake.

Bob Nixon, representing the club's western chapter, said the chemical is called Dinoseb and has been compared in toxicity to sodium cyanide.

He said it is reported to be seven times more toxic than the controversial 2,4-D.

"Now that the B.C. Forest Service is going into extensive forestry, we have to protect ourselves from hare-brained schemes," he said.

Nixon said appeals are heard by the pesticide control appeal board under the jurisdiction of the ministry of environment.

HANDICAPPED TO GET MORE

The human resources ministry has increased by almost $500,000 the amount it grants achievement centres for the handicapped across the province.

Agencies in the Victoria area are among the 74 sharing the $450,000 increase retroactive to Oct. 1. The money assists the centres in the cost of supplies and salaries.

While the increase is welcome, it is still a long way from being adequate, says George Bate, executive director of the Garth Homer Achievement Centre.

Bate said the increase to 73 cents per participant hour from 62.5 cents is simply keeping pace with inflation, and allows no room for expansion of programs.

Two programs run by the Garth Homer group and the Arbutus Crafts, which operates from the same building, were among those qualifying for the increase.

Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm said in a press release the centres provide work experience and other activities for 4,000 handicapped.

The centres are run by community-based societies. Those attending programs are persons with physical, mental and retardation handicaps.

'NEGATIVISM STUNTING CANADA'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada's economy probably will not grow significantly during the next few decades, not because of a lack of resources, but because of the attitude of Canadians, Herman Kahn of New York's Hudson Institute said Tuesday.

Kahn and the two co-authors of the institute's latest publication, Canada Has A Future, were speaking at a one-day seminar of corporate planners.

Like other industrial countries, Canada is entering a period of malaise, Kahn said. He said malaise means "neither sick nor well" and applies only to advanced capitalist or Communist countries.

This prevalent no-growth feeling is revealed here, he said, where most people would be horrified if Vancouver grew to its potential as a world capital.

The Fraser Valley alone could support 10 million people, providing a huge, bustling market, Kahn said, but when the audience was asked how many wanted that, only four hands went up.

Marie-José Drouin, the Canadian director of the Hudson Institute, said the limits-to-growth theory, with its accompanying pessimism, has become very popular in Canada.

Canadians still believe that the country is running out of energy and land and that pollution is worsening although there is no evidence to support that thinking, she said.

Drouin said the institute maintains that, given Canada's open spaces, vast resources and sparse population, there is no need for such pessimism.

Uneasiness about labor relations, inflation and the devalued dollar have combined to make investors jittery, she said.

"There is virtually stagnant investment except in the energy sector," she said. "Not only is the inflation rate unpredictable but it varies from period to period. That's why there is a shift for short-term investment."

Davey Succeeds Stu Keate

CLARK DAVEY

STUART KEATE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Appointment of Clark W. Davey of Toronto as publisher of The Vancouver Sun was announced Tuesday by Ronald L. Cliff, chairman of the evening newspaper's advisory board, and retiring publisher Stuart Keate.

Davey, 50, had been managing editor of The Globe and Mail in Toronto for 15 years. He assumed duties here today.

Keate, 65, reached retirement age recently but will continue his association with The Sun as a member of the advisory committee. He was named publisher in 1964.

"It seems obvious that there has been a gradual shift of political and economic influence to the West," Davey said when introduced to his staff. "As the largest daily newspaper west of Toronto, The Sun will have an important watchdog role to perform."

The Globe and Mail and The Sun, which has a daily circulation of 252,000, are controlled by FP Publications Ltd.

Davey was born in Chatham, Ont., and graduated in 1948 from the University of Western Ontario's first class in journalism.

He has been active in newspaper affairs as a director of The Canadian Press for eight years and chairman of the editorial division of the Canadian Daily Newspapers' Publishers' Association.

Keate said Davey is "recognized as one of the top journalists in Canada and a man who has contributed mightily to The Globe and Mail's reputation as one of the most respected newspapers in the world."

A graduate of the University of British Columbia in 1935, Keate began his newspaper career as a sportswriter in Vancouver and Toronto.

Keate joined the Royal Canadian Navy Volunteer Reserve and saw service in the Atlantic and Pacific zones during the Second World War.

He worked in Montreal and New York following the war and in 1950 was named publisher of the Victoria Times.

In Victoria, Keate was active in civic affairs, particularly with the Chamber of Commerce which he served as president for a term. Keate was named a director of FP Publications in 1958.

Keate was elected to the Newspaper Hall of Fame by the Toronto Press Club in 1974 and in 1976 was made an Officer of the Order of Canada by Gov.-Gen. Jules Leger.

He said he plans to spend his retirement "writing, travelling, playing some bad golf and getting to know my grandchildren a little better."

Unions Wasting Dues: Williams

VANCOUVER (CP) — Labor Minister Allan Williams has criticized unions for spending membership funds on a campaign to fight introduction of right-to-work legislation in British Columbia.

Williams suggested in an interview Tuesday that if unions have funds to spend in that way their dues are too high and they should be giving the money back to their members.

He questioned how much the International Woodworkers of America (IWA) spent on a booklet opposing right-to-work and cited the recent convention decision of the Hospital Employees Union (HEU) to launch a $100,000 campaign against such a law.

For the third time in a row Williams turned aside right-to-work resolutions at the Social Credit Party's recent annual convention.

In response to Williams, HEU secretary-manager Jack Gerow said, "We think this provincial government is still capable of introducing right-to-work legislation."

Syd Thompson, president of Vancouver Local 1-217 of the IWA, said the booklets cost his union very little.

CHARGES DROPPED

CRANBROOK (CP) — Charges against Cominco Ltd. for allegedly polluting the St. Mary's River have been dismissed in provincial court because of a lack of evidence.

Blasted Outhouse

FORT ST. JAMES (CP) — A man who blasted an occupied outhouse with a shotgun was given a suspended sentence Tuesday and put on probation for three years.

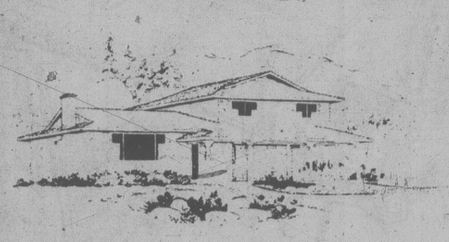

John Raymond Prince, 26, was sentenced by Judge C. J. Woodliffe in provincial court for causing bodily harm with intent to wound Alexander Tom at nearby Pinchi July 28.

MAC-BLO JACKS UP PRICES

VANCOUVER (UPI) — MacMillan Bloedel, Canada's largest forest products corporation, announced Tuesday it will increase the price of newsprint on Feb. 1, 1979.

Prices in eastern Canada will rise to $370 from $339.50 a metric ton. B.C.Interior and Alberta rates are to go to $376 from $341.50 a metric ton, and B.C.'s Lower Mainland prices will increase to $376 a metric ton from $336.

Company spokesmen said the increases were not owing to a planned $600 million expansion program but "to the rise in cost of operation."

MacMillan Bloedel recently announced record nine-month profits of $72.9 million — nearly double those for the same 1977 period.

The company also declared a special end-of-year dividend of 25 cents a share, in addition to the regular 25-cents-a-share quarterly dividend.

Pacific Fish-Rule Changes Pass

VANCOUVER (CP) — Changes to an agreement governing fishing in the northern Pacific Ocean were approved Monday by delegates to a meeting of the International North Pacific Fisheries Commission.

The meeting is the first since the agreement was revised last April after lengthy negotiations between Canada, the United States and Japan.

The change in the international convention for the high seas fisheries was prompted by the 1976 decision by Canada and the U.S. to declare 320-kilometre fishing zones.

Kenjiro Nishimura, chairman of the Japanese representatives, said that while some procedural steps remain before the protocol amending the convention comes into effect, fishing this season followed the new rules.

Elmer Rasmuson of the U.S. national section said when the boundaries were enlarged it became apparent that the agreements would be changed because they were inconsistent with new realities of fishery jurisdiction.

Rasmuson said he was pleased with the reduced number of North American salmon caught by other nations in the 1978 season.

D. F. Miller, of Vancouver, spokesman for the Canadian national section, said he believes the revised treaty framework "more accurately reflects the realities of the new order of fisheries management."

Meanwhile, Jerry Spitz, president of the Fisheries Association of British Columbia, says a single national policy on fisheries could do more harm than good.

The spokesman for B.C.'s fish processors was commenting Monday on a government-commissioned report on the federal government's role regarding new marketing alternatives for Canada's fisheries.

Prepared by P. S. Ross and Partners, the report listed a wide range of possibilities from a minor government involvement within an open market system to a compulsory national marketing board.

Ottawa's insistence on nationwide fisheries policies in the past has led to waste and disruption in the industry, said Spitz.

He singled out the federal groundfish subsidy which was recently discontinued after pouring $2,665,000 into benefits for West Coast fishermen and processors.

Pill-Burning Number One

VANCOUVER (CP) — More than 2,500 old prescribed drugs were shovelled into the Vancouver General Hospital's incinerator Monday.

It was the first pill-burning in the ministry of health's recently-launched campaign to get people to give their unused prescription and over-the-counter drugs to their local druggist.

The campaign was launched after statistics were released showing that of the 10,000 poison cases rushed to hospital emergency wards every year in B.C., one-third are children under four years old poisoned by drugs lying around the house.

As an extra inducement to bring back unused drugs, the health minister announced that people delivering them to their pharmacist are automatically entered in a draw for a trip-for-two to Mazatlan, Mexico.

Ritz Employee Cleared On Bawdy House Rap

VANCOUVER (CP) — A night desk clerk charged with allowing the Ritz International Hotel to be used as a common bawdy house was found not guilty Tuesday in provincial court.

Judge Jack McGivern told the defendant, Sheila Hughes, 36, that while he didn't doubt from the evidence of police officers that the hotel was used by prostitutes, "I have no hesitation in finding you not guilty."

Hughes was charged June 21 after a police investigation showed known prostitutes repeatedly went with different men to the hotel between May 28 and June 20. Hughes testified, however, that she was only a hotel trainee at the time.

Judge McGivern said he knew no legal way "you could exclude single women from moving around your hotel simply on the basis they were single women."

PM, Premiers Locked In Talks Over BNA

Trudeau's constitutional package includes a promise to open talks for more provincial control over natural resources, communications, fisheries and a limitation of federal spending and regulatory powers.

As well, he wants the special committee to discuss proposals from the federal government and British Columbia on greater provincial representation in the Senate, Supreme Court of Canada and federal regulatory institutions.

Earlier in the conference, there was a consensus among the premiers for all these topics to be discussed by the committee, which is to report to a first ministers' conference [illegible] year.

The consensus collapsed when Trudeau demanded they also discuss patriation, an amending formula for a new constitution and insertion of a charter of human rights.

His insistence angered Levesque, who abandoned the low profile he had maintained throughout the conference to accuse Trudeau of chicanery.

"We are two people from Quebec giving a spectacle," Levesque said referring to the national television audience watching their bickering.

Trudeau, in turn, accused Levesque of trying to maintain Canada as a British colony and of preventing Canada from ever having its own constitution.

"Quebec, until it gains complete independence, will not allow Canada to have its own constitution," Trudeau said.

The idea of a package deal on the constitution, suggested by Trudeau at dinner, came "as a brutal shock," Levesque said.

As it became clear that several premiers were balking at his suggestions for bringing home the constitution in return for greater power over such things as resources, communications and tax and spending authority, Trudeau made an exasperated attempt to change their minds.

"What remains to be said?" he asked.

"Quebec, until it gains complete political independence, will not allow Canada to have its own constitution."

Levesque accused Trudeau of chicanery for trying to force the provinces to agree to patriating the 1867 British North America Act as a condition to any realignment of federal and provincial powers.

Papers Struck

not being discussed, said Needham.

Company spokesman Jerry Marr said early today that he had no comment on the current state of negotiations.

Major issues in the dispute are the pressmen's manning clause, sub-contracting out and manning for mailers, and proposed exclusions from The Newspaper Guild.

Needham said Monday the company had offered the pressmen $5,000 a man for relinquishing the present manning formula. He said a similar offer was made to mailers.

The pressmen's manning clause determines the number of men present on a given shift.

The 103 members of the pressmen's union and the 86 members of the Vancouver Mailers Union rejected the buy-out offer that would have cost Pacific Press an estimated $1 million.

U.S. Dollar Gets Boost

He said the long slide in the dollar, which has dropped precipitously in recent weeks against many major currencies, "is hampering progress toward price stability, and is damaging the climate for investment and growth."

"The time has come to call a halt to this development," he said.

The United States has been under growing pressure to intervene on a large scale in foreign exchange markets by buying up unwanted U.S. dollars with borrowed foreign currencies, and Blumenthal appeared to be saying this would now be done.

In addition to the $30 billion in resources, Blumenthal said the government will increase its sales of official gold to at least 1.5 million ounces monthly, beginning in December, and also will borrow up to $5 billion from the International Monetary Fund and issue foreign-denominated securities in amounts up to $10 billion.

He said the United States was taking what can only be interpreted as drastic actions to support the dollar because "failure to act now would be injurious to the American and the world economy."

Bank Hanky-Panky Charged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. justice department is investigating allegations that major U.S. banks have worked to cause fluctuations in the dollar on world currency markets and have profited illegally from those activities, The Washington Post reported today.

The newspaper said an unnamed spokesman had confirmed that the justice department "is in the early stages of a civil investigation" into the possiblity that some banks have designed their trading in the dollar overseas to reap profits by forcing fluctuations.

The Post said the alleged illegal activity would be a violation of price-fixing statutes under the Sherman Antitrust Act. The paper said legal experts believe the justice department would likely seek an injunction preventing further violations, but would "be hard-pressed" to do anything else.

'Makeshift' Child Law, Muzzling Charged

Dec. 31 deadline for submissions by the public is unrealistic, says a city doctor who also claims one of the province's authorities on children's legislation has been forbidden to discuss the results of his research

THE Capital Region's Child Abuse Committee feels the provincial government is attempting to push through a makeshift Family and Child Services Act without allowing time for public submissions, committee chairman Dr. Brian Pound said Tuesday.

Pound, a Victoria physician and chairman of Victoria General Hospital's child abuse team, said the government's Dec. 31 deadline for submitting alternatives is unrealistic.

"The government appears to be making a token attempt to allow public input but in practical terms doesn't appear to be doing that," he said in an interview.

He also charged that the human resources department has muzzled one of the province's authorities on children's legislation.

Pound said Vic Belknap, B.C.'s superintendant of child welfare, is now engaged in co-ordinating public submissions on the white paper.

However, Pound said Belknap spent a whole year studying children's legislation in other jurisdictions and drawing up his own proposed changes to the present Protection of Children Act, passed in 1901. But when pressed on the nature of his proposals Belknap says he has been forbidden to give any details, Pound said.

He said there are a lot of guidelines from other areas for legislation the B.C. government seems to want but the Socreds are not allowing enough time for the research work to be done.

"It really appalls me that this government is trying to push through a makeshift act."

Belknap is to compile a report based on the submissions he receives and that report is to form the basis for legislation which Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm says will be introduced at the spring session.

Pound said he has also heard that John Noble, deputy minister of human resources, is preparing additions to the white paper and with the existing deadline there will be little time for public comment on these.

The local child abuse committee, made up of people from various professions, says in a statement it supports the intent of the proposed legislation as laid out in the preamble — such as protecting children from abuse and providing assistance to families where the normal development of children is at risk — but feels such lofty principles are not supported by the language in the proposed act.

For example, the committee says, the paper contains no definition of child abuse nor does it incorporate any of the steps essential for resolving child abuse cases.

"If child abuse legislation is to be effective, the elements of child abuse must be defined as specifically as possible.

"Definitions vary but tend to combine two or more of the four following elements: a non-accidental physical injury, sexual molestation, neglect, emotional abuse or mental cruelty."

The committee is also concerned that there is no mandate in the proposed legislation for the ministry of human resources to carry out preventive services and that remedial services are only implied.

Pound said it is a great deal cheaper to provide such preventive services rather than wait until after the fact and have to deal with the people involved through the court system or handle continued abuse cases.

The committee also feels the rights and responsibilities of parents, children and society are very inadequately covered in the white paper.

Pound said his group is also concerned that the meat of the proposed legislation will be contained in regulations which can be brought in by cabinet through order-in-council rather than be debated by and meet the approval of the legislature.

In an effort to give some kind of picture of the extent of the child abuse problem in Victoria, Pound said 23 per cent of the total provincial percentage of child abuse cases occur in this area.

"Either we are better at abusing our kids or we are better at reporting," Pound said.

BUT he added that the reported cases are only the tip of the iceberg and it is hoped that through education people will be better able to come to grips with the problem.

He said there are a number of groups in the Victoria area — Parents in Crisis is one — which are dealing with the problem but an effort must be made to co-ordinate their activities.

Steps are under way now to hire a person to do just that, he added.

A public forum om the government white paper will take place Nov. 30 at 8 p.m. in the Newcombe Auditorium. The forum is sponsored by an ad hoc committee of concerned groups involved in the child welfare field.

'Dead' Drunk Acquittal Upheld

A three-man B.C. Court of Appeal has upheld a Victoria county court decision to acquit a Gordon Head man who had breath test readings of .40 on April 18, 1977.

Joseph John Woitas, 4401 Tremblay Drive, was arrested at the Pat Bay airport, subsequent readings of .40 were obtained and he was charged with impaired driving and driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 per cent.

Judge Harold Alder in provincial court convicted Woitas following a trial Aug. 27, 1977, but defence lawyer Jeffrey Green appealed the decision.

Green's appeal centred around testimony that readings of .40 usually meant the person was either unconscious or dead.

Under questioning by Green, the arresting RCMP officer Constable John Eugene Hasiuk said he took Woitas to the Sidney detachment office for the breath test and was amazed at the high readings compared to Woitas' physical appearance.

Hasiuk agreed that either Woitas had an extremely abnormal tolerance to alcohol or there was something wrong with the testing machine because a person with a reading of .40 ought to be dead, near death or at least unconscious.

Judge Montague Drake ruled Hasiuk's testimony raised a reasonable doubt and accordingly reversed the decision May 30, 1978, in Victoria county court. The Crown appealed.

Chief Justice John Farris and Justices J.D. Taggert and Peter Seaton reheard the case and confirmed the county court decision.

CATTY EXPRESSION worn by this Victoria puss may look fierce but it's just your average morning-after-Halloween yawn. Wouldn't you be tired after a long day's night scaring sundry mini-witches off their broomsticks and hopping after hobgoblins? It's not easy being a black cat on Halloween.

Needle-Spiked Apples Spark 'Goodies' Alert

Police today urged the parents of children involved in trick and treating in the Victoria West area Tuesday night to check Halloween handouts carefully following two complaints of apples being handed out with needles hidden inside them.

The complaints were the only serious incidents in a relatively damage-free Halloween in Greater Victoria.

So far there have been no reports of injuries caused by spiked treats.

One parent, Frances Briggs of 795 Fairview, noticed a needle in an apple her child had received from a home on Belton Street.

For the most part, police and firemen reported a surprisingly peaceful night, all things considered.

There was the usual egg-throwing, turning on of fire hydrants and uprooting of street signs but damage was minimal.

In Saanich, two juveniles and two adults were taken into custody and face charges ranging from assaulting a police office to obstruction and causing a disturbance following a noisy egg-tossing affair in front of the Prospect Lake store.

Sidney RCMP also expect to lay charges of causing a disturbance against a number of youths who hurled eggs and overturned a cement garbage container on Beacon.

Saanich also had a bombing when a Molotov Cocktail was hurled into a parking lot outside the Thomas More Centre on Gordon Head near Feltham.

The explosion created an enormous fireball that caused no damage.

There were two minor overnight fires associated with fireworks. In Saanich, a Roman candle backfired and landed in a tree beside a house at 750 Snowdrop where it started a small fire.

Metchosin Group Backs Incorporation

The Metchosin Ratepayers Association will hold a special meeting at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Metchosin Community Hall to outline reasons residents should vote in favor of incorporation on Nov. 18.

The association has produced a table of estimated cost projections that shows there would be a substantial reduction in taxes if the area had a responsible council.

Planning and zoning decisions at the local level, says vice-presicent John Craggs, would ensure retention of Metchosin's rural atmosphere and the appointment of a municipal animal control officer would protect livestock.

The association says, while road repair and maintenance would be carried out by the provincial highways ministry, it would be directed by the municipal council and, if necessary, specific work contracted out to local equipment operators.

The association says because Metchosin has a limited area and population a municipal council could espond immediately to the concerns of the community.

Before Tuesday's meeting an all-candidates meeting for school trustees will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the hall.

Chamber Pitch Ready For Saanich Plebiscite

Victoria Chamber of Commerce will soon launch a publicity campaign to gain support for the Nov. 18 Saanich plebiscite on industrial development.

Campaign co-ordinator Cedric Steele said the chamber will spend $1,000 on newspaper and radio advertising beginning in one week.

The chamber will also send representatives to radio hotline shows and local TV interviews.

Steele said the chamber will urge Saanich residents to vote yes on the three questions:

— Do you favor industrial development in Saanich?

— Would you favor Royal Oak as a proposed industrial site?

— Would you favor the Interurban Road area as a proposed industrial site?

Steele said the chamber feels industrial development is vital in Saanich and both proposed sites would be appropriate.

Royal Oak would be an ideal location for light warehousing and distribution while the Interurban site would be better for storage of heavy equipment.

"We are not talking about smokestacks at either location," he said.

"We are looking for clean industries for this area."

He said Saanich must have industry to broaden its municipal tax base.

Steele said the chamber coordinating committee will call a press conference within a week to give further details of the campaign.

Priceless, You Say? Well, Maybe

max low

So you have that priceless whatsit safely stored away in the attic.

Often you've wondered just what it is worth and thought that if you sold it maybe life would be a little easier.

Well, there's a new man in — and out of — town who can help you on both of those counts. He can take a close look at whatever it is you have, whether it's a painting or an antique, and give you a pretty fair idea of its value. He can also arrange for it to be whisked away and sold in London or New York at the famed Christie's auction rooms.

Murray Mackay has a degree in fine arts history and another in interior design, has studied in London, Paris and Los Angeles and has more than 30 years experience dealing, collecting and advising on antiques and works of art. He recently was appointed Christie's representative for Western Canada and Washington State.

Actually Mackay, born in Edinburgh, lives in Vancouver where he moved to from California 11 years ago. As well as running his own interior design business, he has operated on the side as an appraiser of antiques and works of art.

Like its rivals Sotherby's and Philips', Christie's has its head office in London but as well as New York has branches in Geneva, Rome and Amsterdam.

The firm was founded in 1766 by James Christie, said to be a man of great personality, wit and knowledge, who recorded each sale faithfully from a fine picture to "72 loads of truly excellent meadow hay," and from a jewelled box to "a coffin offered by a citizen who had a most remarkable recovery from a malady usually regarded by the medical fraternity as fatal."

What most people don't know is that there are far more items sold at Christie's for less than $250 than for more than that,' says Murray Mackay of the world-famous auction house

Today, you won't see too many loads of truly excellent meadow hay in a Christie's auction room but you will see prized art pieces from all over the world.

World record prices are still being set at Christie's. Only a week ago someone paid $176,000 for two chairs (a pair of Queen Anne walnut side chairs) in New York.

"That week was our best week ever in North America with a turnover of $5 million," Mackay told me.

"What most people don't know, though," he added, "is that there are far more items sold at Christie's for less than $250 than for more than that."

So there you have it. If you are tempted to part with that whatsit, you know where to go. But what is the advantage of Christie's and of Murray Mackay to you? Exposure and speed, said Mackay, in that order.

"Anywhere from 6,000 to 10,000 catalogues are printed for a sale (there are two sales daily at Christie's in London and two or three sales a week in New York) and the catalogues go to people on our mailing list all over the world.

"The advantage is that we have 20,000 to 25,000 people at a sale whereas if you put your art work into an antique shop the owner would be lucky to have that many people in his store over the whole year."

So, before the appointment of Mackay a person in Victoria wishing to sell would either have to go through an antique store where Mackay said it just would not realize its full value. Or contact Christie's in London direct.

"But then they would have to send photos of what they're selling," he explained. "These photos have to be checked and catalogued and then the seller has to arrange the transportation of the goods himself. We can do all this and, by shipping in bulk from Vancouver, save both time and money. What once used to take the exchange of four or five letters, now simply takes a phone call."

Even with Mackay's help, it still takes about three months from the time something goes to Christie's until you get the money in your hand. And if it's sold in New York, of course, that money will be in U.S. funds.

As far as you're concerned the only big hazard in the whole operation is truth. I mean, you musn't get too upset to discover that your priceless whatsit isn't too er, well . . . priceless.

You see, Christie's guarantees everything it sells. A person buying something at the auction rooms and then finding out it isn't what it was sold as, can return it and get his money back — even up to six years later!

"And so we have to be very careful that we are right," Mackay pointed out. "Everything has to be photographed and the photos checked."

If he has the slightest doubt when he looks something over, Mackay has a list of experts he can contact in Vancouver for advice.

Even though this procedure is followed faithfully and photos are sent off for double-checking by Christie's own experts, some people just don't believe it when told their whatsits are worthless.

"I had one woman here in Victoria the other day," he said, "who became quite hostile when she was informed that her painting wasn't up to Christie's standards.

"Quite hostile . . ."

Retirement At 65 Look Ordered

The B.C. Human Rights Commission will conduct an inquiry into the issue of mandatory retirement at age 65, Labor Minister Allan Williams said Tuesday.

The minister said the commission will study the implications of any changes in B.C. and will examine what is being done in other jurisdictions.

He said the government will not interfere in the situation in the meantime. Retirement ages are set by collective agreement and not by law at present.

Williams said the Human Rights Code will continue to provide anti-discrimination protection for those between 45 and 65.

The minister said he does not intend to retire but thinks mandatory retirement at 65 years is a good idea.

Milfoil Fight Tools Studied By UBC Team

The provincial government has signed a two-year $66,000 agreement with the University of B.C.'s bio-resource engineering department to improve technologies for control of Eurasian water milfoil, Environment Minister Jim Nielsen said Tuesday.

The minister said the aquatic weed now covers 2,000 acres of lakeshore in the Okanagan Valley and Greater Vancouver.

He said the university department, headed by chairman Dr. John Zahradnik, will evaluate and recommend improvements to the existing equipment including harvesters, rotovators and diver-operated dredges.

Two Extra Judges for City

Two supernumary judges have been assigned to Victoria, chief provincial court Judge Lawrence Goulet of Vancouver said Tuesday.

Judge Gilbert Hogg of the Fraser Valley is expected to sit here starting in the late fall and Judge Reg Moir of Kelowna has been assigned to Victoria to handle the extra load caused by a preliminary hearing into a drug case expected to take between four and six weeks.

Supernumary judges work 60 per cent of a full-time judge's time for 60 per cent pay and Goulet said, in Hogg's case, it was precisely the amount of expansion required for the overloaded Victoria courtrooms without constructing new facilities at the Law Courts on Burdett.

Goulet said Moir won't necessarily sit on the preliminary hearing scheduled to open Nov. 20. Fifteen men are charged jointly with conspiracy to import about 13 tons of marijuana with an estimated wholesale value of $20.8 million.

The case involves the largest marijuana seizure in Canadian history, involving 600 to 700 Canadian armed forces personnel, two Canadian warships and 50 RCMP officers off the west coast of Vancouver Island on July 15.

He said the decision on assigning duties in Victoria provincial courtrooms remains with Judge William Ostler.

Before the Judge

A 19-year-old pleaded guilty in provincial court Tuesday to setting four fires over a three-day period in October.

Albert Alexander Gratton, no fixed address, appeared before Judge William Ostler in connection with four break-ins and three auto thefts as well.

He had entered guilty pleas Oct. 23 to break-ins at 2844 Doncaster on Sept. 24, Ferny's Auto Body Shop, 728 Pembroke, on Sept. 29 and Oct. 5, and 8449 West Saanich between Sept. 10 and 20.

Gratton then pleaded guilty to wilfully setting fire to material likely to cause fire at Beacon Hill Park's Cameron Bandshell on Oct. 15 and 17, and at the Cricket Pavilion in the park and at 1287 Rockland on Oct. 17.

Not guilty pleas were entered on charges that he set fire on Oct. 19 to material at 230 Cook and 960 Yates.

Gratton was remanded until today to deal with sentencing.

Three Montreal youths were given jail terms and two-year probations by Judge Blake Allan.

Robert Bourdon, 19, and Alen Thomas, 20, were given 60-day terms while Steves Paradis, 19, received a 30-day sentence for possession of housebreaking instruments Oct 4.

They were convicted following a preliminary hearing which was turned into a trial by defence lawyer James Main.

The trio was arrested by city police about 3:30 a.m. in the 2500-block Blanshard. A knapsack containing a wrecking bar, hammer and tinsnips was found in a nearby vacant field after one of the officers noticed that a sack had been carried by one of the three when first spotted.

Judge Ostler handed out an unusual fine to a 23-year-old former Canadian serviceman who pleaded guilty to breaking and entering.

Michael Ricard, who gave Esquimalt police an address of the Six Mile House hotel at 497 Island Highway, admitted breaking into a house at 864 Colville Road.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said Ricard and his roommate borrowed a car Oct. 17 and went to the residence where the companion went into the house while Ricard drove into the garage.

They went into the living room where they removed stereo equipment and took the goods to their home where it was stored for a couple of days before being moved.

Defence lawyer Bonnie Hallas told the court Ricard was from Laval, Que., and had been in the navy for seven months but did not like the armed forces treatment.

She said Ricard left the service in September and had no income or funds. However, she continued, a friend had provided a plane ticket for him to get home.

Mulligan said he would not oppose Ostler's suggestion for a fine and probation because Ricard had no previous convictions.

An active serviceman also received a $350 fine and was placed on six months' probation for possessing and using stolen credit cards.

Larry Gordon Campbell, 19, of HMCS Qu'Appelle, was on leave in May, Mulligan said, when he used a stolen credit card to purchase $8.40 worth of gasoline in Kamloops.

The cards were reported stolen from Swift Current, Campbell's home town.

Campbell told the court he had made restitution for money spent with the cards and said the cards had been returned to the owner.

A 20-year-old who failed to show up for his trial was given concurrent, 20-day jail terms after pleading guilty to prowling by night and failing to appear in court.

Gerald Wayne Kitchen, 1070 Esquimalt, missed an Oct. 13 trial date because he was working on the railroad in Saskatchewan, defence lawyer Brian MacKenzie said.

The prowling charge arose from a May 18 incident at a second-floor apartment at 280 Douglas, Mulligan stated.

Kitchen was spotted trying the balcony door and, when asked what he was doing by a tenant, said he was looking for a place to sleep.

Ostler imposed the sentences after noting that Kitchen was convicted of loitering at night March 22, 1977, and fined $100.

Stephen Brent Fairbairn, 19, no fixed address, was placed on one year's probation and ordered to perform 100 hours of community work.

Defence lawyer Jasper Bomhof asked the judge to take into consideration Fairbairn had been sentenced to 14 days for disobeying a 10 p.m. curfew Judge Ostler imposed while a pre-sentence report was being prepared.

Barry Allan Safnuk, 18, of 830 Gladiola, was placed on a year's probation and was ordered to do 150 hours of community service work.

Safnuk admitted breaking into a restaurant at 617 Johnson on Sept. 10, into Sandy's Auto Parts, 1023 View and attempting to break into Wratten's Auto Paint Shop, 1027 View.

Defence lawyer said the month Safnuk had spent in custody had been a severe jolt to him.

Fined for drinking driving were: David Andrew McGoldrick, 17, of 948 Esquimalt, $500; Gregory Allan Shave, 27, of 121 Beechwood, $450; and Roy Hearn, 57, of 631 Treanor, $50.

In addition, Hearn was placed on six months' probation and ordered to perform 200 hours of community service work.

Hoe-Swinging Altercation Described at Murder Trial

A 21-year-old woman told a B.C. Supreme Court jury Tuesday she saw her uncle and another man swinging hoes at each other June 26 in a Central Saanich potato field.

Mary Ann Henry was testifying at the second day of the trial of farm laborer Avtar Singh Gill, 40, accused of second degree murder following the death in hospital of Joseph Pelkey, 54.

Henry said she was working in the potato field when she heard conversation between Pelkey and Gill although not their exact words because she was too far away.

She said she saw them swinging hoes at each other with Pelkey backing up and Gill going forward. Pelkey dropped his hoe after Gill hit him, she said. Then Pelkey tried to grab Gill's hoe.

She said Pelkey was her uncle who lived with her mother and she had known him all her life. Pelkey was sober and in a good mood the morning of the incident, she said.

Under cross-examination, Henry agreed she had seen Pelkey drunk on occasion but denied he got into fights at such times. She said there were arguments on occasion but denied that they started when he was drinking.

Pathologist Dr. Jack Cottrell said he performed an autospy June 27. There was a wound just over three inches deep just below the collar bone which almost completely severed the auxiliary artery and vein.

He said a small, relatively long, sharp instrument would have caused the wound. But he conceded it was entirely possible Pelkey could have fallen on a sharp object.

There was also a small cut at the back of the skull.

Cottrell said Pelkey suffered from liver and heart disease but when asked if the man could have survived without these diseases, replied "a chance, that's all."

A test of the blood-alcohol content showed a level of .08 per cent. He agreed the blood-alcohol content would be lower than it might normally be because of massive blood transfusions in hospital.

Volunteer firefighter Peter Cellarius said he responded to an ambulance call and found Pelkey in a half-sitting position shortly after 8:30 a.m. with his clothes full of blood and a wound in the right shoulder.

There was a stale smell of alcohol on his breath but it looked like it came from drinking the night before and not just before the incident.

He said Pelkey told him "I'll get him." Asked if Pelkey also said "when I get a hold of him, I'll kill him," Cellarius replied "the word killed was used."

Constable Jack Hill said he had known Pelkey but had never had a fight with him and never seen him in a fight in the past. He said Pelkey would test his authority but never threatened to fight.

Constable Peter Martin said he found Pelkey sitting at the edge of a road near Island View Beach with a great quantity of blood coming from his right shoulder.

He apprehended Gill who was hoeing in a field and immediately ran into a language problem.

(Proceedings in court are being translated into Punjabi for Gill who understands little English).

Martin said Gill was passive and he noted no injuries to him.

Questioned about Pelkey's background, he said he had responded to calls where he had a domestic dispute and he was generally somewhat belligerent on initial contact but with firmness would become stable.

He said the degree of Pelkey's testing was affected when he was drinking and he would often challenge the officer's authority to be on an Indian reserve.

"He was certainly a man who was prone to losing his temper," Martin said.

Asked if Pelkey was a short-tempered man, he said "yes, that is a fair statement."

Shupe's Shouting Shakes Cougars

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Among the Western Hockey League coaches, Ernie McLean of New Westminster and Pat Ginnell of Lethbridge are expected to show emotion in the players' box during a game.

But Jack Shupe?

Not often. The Victoria Cougar coach is, normally, a placid individual. From Shupe, a good shout is indicative of a temper tantrum.

The emotion, however, is showing. He's shouting more often and, in the past two home games at least, has been caught showing considerable emotion. There was more Tuesday night as the Cougars defeated Lethbridge Broncos 6-3.

It's not the kind of display that results in suspension. No hat or stick is thrown but Shupe's extra vocal stirring may suggest something.

"Maybe the fact that we're out-shooting everybody but not scoring goals is starting to get to me," he suggested. "We broke our losing streak but I don't think that, even with six goals, we have ended our scoring slump."

Always in charge, the Cougars out-shot Lethbridge 59-29. That might suggest that Lethbridge goaltender Mark Frank was outstanding with his 53-stop display.

"Not really," said Shupe. "I think our shooters made him look good. Too many shots were right at him. We should have had six goals in the first period. It's upsetting."

George Fritz, Rob Clavette, Mickey Willgres, Torrie Robertson, Gary Lupul and Bob Smith did find openings, however, and that was enough to break a four-game losing streak.

Jay Soleway, Duane Sutter and Doug Morrison scored for Lethbridge in a game that produced some Halloween fireworks to mark Ginnell's first visit to Victoria since packing it in as the coach here and winding up in Lethbridge.

A hard-hitting affair but generally controlled by referee Bob Hall, it produced 185 minutes in penalties, including 117 during a second-period free-for-all that resulted in nine game misconducts, five majors and a minor.

Hall's banishment of four Cougars and five Broncos hurt Lethbridge more than the Cougars.

"We ran out of gas," said Ginnell. "We also missed (Simon) Learmouth, our second best defenceman who's out with a bad knee; (Dave) Snopek, my best leftwinger who has a bad ankle, and (team captain Lindy) Ruff, out with a shoulder separation."

The Cougars, also hurting with high-scoring Geordie Robertson and defenceman Mark Robinson on the sidelines, got a big scare when Lupul took an early leave. A standout, Lupul suffered a charley-horse but it is not considered serious and the veteran centre is expected to play in Portland tonight when the Cougars go against the Winter Hawks.

Apart from the victory, Shupe found pleasure in the performance of his defencemen, particularly rookies Tony Feltrin, Bob Jacobson and Steve Blyth.

Todd Morton also came up with a strong performance until he was slapped with one of the game misconducts and was forced to retire for the night in the second period. Scott Lang, the only other experienced defenceman and returning to the lineup after a two-game absence because of a charley-horse, suffered through a medicore game.

(Summaries on page 21)

GOALKEEPER Mark Frank of Lethbridge Broncos missed grab for the puck, and rubber sails harmlessly over the net in a Western Hockey League game against Victoria Cougars Tuesday night at Memorial Arena. Prepared to pursue puck are Al May (8) of Broncos and Gary Lupul (9) of Cougars. Several other shots, including one by Lupul, didn't miss as Cougars won 6-3 to end four-game losing streak despite 59 saves by Frank.

Jim TAYLOR

Omigod! . . . Howard!
She Hit Her in the . . .

Due to the spot of postal bother it took a while for Ms. F. McDonald's letter to arrive from Merritt. Delay has not noticeably diluted the venom.

Ms. McDonald was—and presumably still is—upset over what she considers slighting remarks over the licencing of three women—Marian Trimiar, Jackie (Tonawanda) Garret and the immortal Cathy (Cat) Davis to box professionally in the state of New York. A man who would say things like that, she suggests, is ... well, let her tell it:

"After your incredibly narrow-minded and thoroughly unintellectual comments about women I had to write and put you straight.

"Women are equal to men. If men cannot see that very clearly it is because their ego and not their intellect is in the way. To judge the superiority of one sex over another by whether one is capable of boxing or not is about as stupid as being convinced that God is a man or that ice hockey is all this world has to offer.

"The reason most women would never consider going into boxing (or ice hockey) is because they see it for what it is—barbaric. Only a male could be moronic enough to call it entertainment.

"It seems, Mr. Taylor, that you still live in the Victorian age. Didn't you know that women don't spend all day in the kitchen now? Didn't you know that women are doctors, lawyers, clergywomen, politicians, teachers, businesswomen etc., and the ones who do give up careers to raise children have an equal if not more important role in this society with miners, plumbers, carpenters, sawmill workers, etc.

"So who made you so superior because you were born a male? Certainly nobody with any intelligence."

Dear Ms.:

If I may take your complaints in order:

1. I am not narrow-minded. Many people have phoned to express wonderment at the width of my head. The word "fat" has occasionally crept in.

2. Women are not equal to men. They are constructed quite differently. Also better. I can see that quite clearly already, but in order to improve my vision I stare at as many of them as I can. There is no substitute for research.

3. You're right: I cannot judge the superiority of one sex over another. There is a logical explanation for this. I have tried only one.

4. If ice hockey was all this world had to offer I'd have left it long ago, probably impaled on a Sherwin NHL model stick. Alan Eagleson would be prime minister, Danny Galivan would be head of the CRTC, and generations of youngsters would grow up saying "and he fails to negotiate contact with the puck!"

5. If you truly believe that only a male could be moronic enough to call boxing entertainment, please check the front five rows the next time there's a major fight on television. If those are all men some of them have weird taste in clothing.

6. I used to live in Victorian. We moved there from Winnipegian when the winters got too cold.

7. Yes, I am aware that women are doctors, lawyers, teachers and plumbers. In none of those professions are they liable to get punched in tender areas of their anatomy, although it would probably be a good idea.

8. I was judged superior on the grounds that I am a male in a vote conducted in my living room. Elgible voters were my wife, my two children and myself. The final count was 1-0 with three spoiled ballots.

You see, Ms. McDonald, the problem with the women's liberation movement is that it tends to be overburdened with people who are totally devoid of humor. The reason the movement has grown blessedly quiet is that it has died of terminal pomposity.

All I really said was that women's boxing would present certain problems, particulary as a spectator sport.

Trunks would be out. They'd have to be. How could they stage a closed-circuit telecast of a world heavyperson championship bout if the show was hit by the vice squad?

Could they have mixed bouts? Of course not. And if they didn't then the women's liberation types—known for nothing if not for their sense of fair play and equality—would have to boycott any bout in which a recognized male contender was not given the right to hit Cathy the Cat in the chops.

How about the telecast? Could the current fight experts handle it: ("it's a right to the head, a left to the left ... Omigod, Howard, she hit her right in the ... one moment, please.") or would they have to resurrect Phyllis George?

Not that you could ever publicize a women's fight anyway. Fans raised on "I am the greatest!" are not likely to identify with "I'll scratch her eyes out."

There is, however, one faint chance. The first recognized boxing match between women could truly be the fight of the century, bigger even than the Thrilla From Manila.

It could be a brawl right from the opening bell, when the two fighterpersons advance to the centre of the ring—and notice they're both wearing the same color gloves.

Canadians Leading

NEW YORK (CP) — Melanie Smith of Germantown, Pa., won the Whitney Stone Challenge jumping event at the National Horse Show on Tuesday night, but Canada remained in first place in the over-all team standings.

The 28-year-old American rider turned in a fast, flawless ride in a jump-off against Canada's John Simpson, Capt. Con Power of Ireland and Graeme Thomas of New Zealand, to win the event.

Canada leads the team standings with 18 points, one point ahead of the strong Irish team. The U.S. is third and Belgium fourth.

Tony and Tom Have Plenty In Common

MONTREAL (CP) — The Schenley Awards for outstanding play in the Canadian Football League will be presented on Thursday, Nov. 24 in Toronto during Grey Cup week, but the 10 finalists for the five awards were announced in Montreal Tuesday and there were a few familiar faces among the nominees.

The most familiar were in the outstanding-player category where quarterback Tom Wilkinson of Edmonton Eskimos was named as the Western Conference representative and tight end Tony Gabriel of Ottawa Rough Riders emerged as the choice for the Eastern Conference.

Wilkinson and Gabriel have a great deal in common beginning with the fact their teams are conference champions.

The Edmonton quarterback is the only man in the CFL with a career passing completion percentage of more than 60 per cent, while the Ottawa tight end is the only player to have gained 1,000 yards on receptions in four consecutive seasons.

Gabriel could be the busiest guest at the awards banquet as he is also a candidate for an unprecedented third consecutive Canadian player-of-the-year award.

The Western representative in that category is wide receiver Joe Poplawski of Winnipeg Blue Bombers. Like Gabriel in the East, Poplawski was the leading receiver in the West and could reach 1,000 yards on receptions with 48 yards in Winnipeg's final game Sunday.

Al Wilson of British Columbia Lions, winner of the offensive-lineman-of-the-year award last season, is again the Western representative in that category. Wilson's opposition will come from another tackle, Jim Coode of Ottawa, a five-year CFL veteran.

Randy Rhino of Montreal Alouettes is pitted against Dave Fennell of Edmonton. Rhino, the best punt-returner in the East this season, earned the nomination for his work at the safety position. Fennell is a tackle.

And apart from Gabriel, Poplawski is the only double nominee this season. He will be up against linebacker Ben Zambiasi of Hamilton Tiger Cats for rookie-of-the-year honors.

Ai-Yu In Lead

YOKAWA, Japan (Reuter) — Taiwan's Tu Ai-Yu shot a six-under-par 68 to take the first-round lead in the $125,000 Mizuno women's golf tournament today.

A field of 73 players from eight countries teed off over the 6,110-yard, par-74 Hanayashiki Club course.

Cavalier Loss Likened To Holding Slick Pig

By Canadian Press

Cleveland Cavaliers coach Bill Fitch has a way with words — even after watching his charges drop their fourth successive game.

"It was like trying to pick up a greased pig with gloves on," he said after Indiana Pacers had downed the Cavaliers 119-114 in a National Basketball Association contest.

Fitch also said the Cavaliers, who won four in a row to open the season before going into their skid, need to work on defence.

"The 119 points are too many to give up, even if we start scoring 120," Fitch said.

Elsewhere, Atlanta Hawks edged Washington Bullets 110-108, Milwaukee Bucks shaded Kansas City Kings 114-112, New Orleans Jazz downed Chicago Bulls 97-92, Phoenix Suns whipped New York Knicks 120-108, Los Angeles Lakers walloped Denver Nuggets 134-107, Golden State Warriors outlasted San Antonio Spurs 139-138 in overtime and Portland Trail Blazers dumped Detroit Pistons, 112-96.

Cleveland led 53-52 at the half behind an 18-point, second-quarter effort by Terry Furlow. But Indiana came back and outscored the Cavaliers 32-16 in the first nine minutes of the third quarter.

Cleveland battled back and pulled to within two points, 97-95, on a jumper by Walt Frazier midway through the fourth quarter. But Indiana then went back up by four, 101-97.

The teams traded baskets and, with 1:08 to play, Jim Chones made two free throws to bring the Cavaliers to within three at 113-110. Indiana then scored four more points to lead 117-110 with 45 seconds left.

Bobby Orr Helps Sports Injury Clinic

TORONTO (CP) — Defenceman Bobby Orr of Chicago Black Hawks has contributed $90,000 to York University to aid in the development and construction of a sports injury clinic on the school's campus, a university spokesman confirmed Tuesday.

Orval McKeough, director of development at York, said the assistance of the National Hockey League player was an essential element in getting the $180,000 project—part of a $4.5 million indoor-outdoor track and field facility on which construction began in July—off the drawing board.

"We had hoped that the complex would be built by the three levels of governent (municipal, provincial and federal), but we needed some help from the private sector," McKeough said.

"We thought it was a real plus when we started negotiating with Bobby."

Orr, who played eight seasons with Boston Bruins before signing with the Black Hawks as a free agent in 1976, has been beset by knee injuries throughout his career—undergoing surgery on his left knee six times.

Cosmos Earn Draw

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador (Reuter) — New York Cosmos of the North American soccer league played to a 1-1 draw against Barcelona of Ecuador in an exhibition game delayed by light failures and fist fights Tuesday night.

The stadium lights went out shortly after Giorgio Chinaglia scored for the Cosmos in the 41st minute, forcing a 40-minute delay. Only partial lighting was restored and players could hardly be seen from the stands in the second half.

Oyola scored for Barcelona in the last minute. One linesman ruled Oyola was offside but the referee allowed the goal and was attacked by a Cosmos player. The referee sent three Cosmos players off but the lights were too dim for them to be identified.

Amazing Flames Working Hard

By Canadian Press

To listen to Bob MacMillan describe it, Atlanta Flames' amazing start to the current National Hockey League season can be traced to one tried and true ingredient — hard work.

"We're working hard," the rugged right winger said Tuesday night after the Flames ran their unbeaten string to 10 games with a 5-2 win over St. Louis Blues. "If we ever reach the point where we don't (work hard), it might be different."

"We've really been getting some good bounces," said MacMillan, who scored his eighth goal of the season and added a pair of assists to move into a three-way tie for top spot in league scoring with 19 points. "We're very much aware of where we are. We used to be such a young team. Now we're a couple of years older."

Atlanta, in registering its eighth victory to go with two ties, matched the longest unbeaten string in club history and remained the only unbeaten team in the NHL.

In Tuesday night's only other game, New York Islanders struck for six third-period goals en route to an 8-5 win over Colorado Rockies.

Guy Chouinard, who is tied with MacMillan and Wayne Babych of the Blues for league-scoring honors, added his eighth goal and also collected three assists.

"We play for each other, said Chouinard, the 22-year-old centre on a line with MacMillan. "We help each other. I think confidence is helping us. It's a big part of the game."

The Flames, the NHL's top-scoring team with 57 goals, capitalized on Richard Mulhern's screened slapshot and a rising blast off the stick of John Gould to grab a 2-0 early lead.

Bill Clement's goal made it 3-0 at 6:23 of the middle period. Then, after Curt Bennett finally broke through for St. Louis, MacMillan's goal only 17 seconds later sealed the outcome.

The Blues' high-scoring "Kid Line" of Babych, Bernie Federko and Brian Sutter was limited to four shots and a lone goal.

Federko wiggled loose to score his fifth of the year with 5:04 left, but prior to that Sutter had been forced to leave the ice when injured by a shot off the stick of teammate Mike Walton.

The drive struck Sutter, the NHL's leading goal-scorer with 11, in the ribs. He was taken to a hospital, where he remained overnight for x-rays and observation.

At Uniondale, N.Y., the victory mattered very little to Islanders coach Al Arbour, who took the opportunity afforded him at a post-game interview to lash out at his club's poor defensive play.

"If they won't play defence, we'll get some players who will," Arbour said. They played one good game all year (against Montreal two weeks ago) and one good period against Pittsburgh — that's the extent of the hockey we've played all year."

Islanders general manager Bill Torrey echoed Arbour's comments.

"If this continues, we'll find players who want to play hockey," said Torrey. "This has been a farce."

Indeed, team defense — for years one of the keys in the club's success — has been deficient in the early going this season. The worst embarrassment was a 10-7 loss to the Leafs in Toronto, but there have been other examples of less-than-top effort.

A's Affiliation Off

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Canadians of the Pacific Coast League announced Tuesday termination of their major league baseball affiliation with Oakland A's in favor of Milwaukeee Brewers.

CFL Experiment

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Football League has announced that it will experiment with public address system relay of game officials' decisions during Sunday's Toronto-Hamilton game.

A CFL spokesman said that if the experiment proves successful, the system may be used for the Grey Cup game in Toronto Nov. 26.

In many televised games, game officials carry a portable transmitter and microphone and the referee's decisions are transmitted to the television sound systems. The same type of transmitter will be used in Sunday's experiment and the referee's announcements will also be picked up the public address system in Ivor Wynne Statium.

Thistles, Tyees In Showdown

Mt. Douglas Thistles and Victoria Tyees are heading for a classic confrontation Friday night as regular-season play wraps up in the Greater Victoria High School Soccer league.

Thistles took over sole possession of the first division lead Tuesday by defeating Spectrum 4-1, leaving idle Tyees one point back.

The two teams, who played to a scoreless draw in their only other match this season, clash at 3:30 p.m. at Mt. Douglas with the league title going to the winner.

In the only other first division battle Tuesday, Reynolds Roadrunners nipped Oak Bay Bays 1-0 to solidify a grip on fourth place and the final playoff spot.

Playoffs begin next Tuesday.

Russ Rimmer was involved in three of the four Mt. Douglas scoring plays during an eight-minute period in the first half.

Jos Iruretagoyana had put Spectrum ahead with a free kick at the 36-minute mark but Drew Porter headed in a corner kick by Rimmer a few minutes later to tie it up.

Then, in rapid succession, Dennis Mamic scored from a goalmouth scramble and Rimmer connected on two penalty shots.

In second-division play, Belmont Braves tripped Stelly's 7-1, while Esquimalt Dockers and Claremont Spartans played to a 2-2 tie.

Scout Pay Cuts Cost

OAKLAND (AP) — The prospective new owners of Oakland A's have offered owner Charles O. Finley about $2 million to act as a talent scout for the team, thus reducing the purchase price of the club.

Ed Bercovich, a member of the group that last week agreed to buy the team and keep it in Oakland, said he offered the scouting job to Finley during negotiations over the sale, and that a $2 million salary was "in the ballpark."

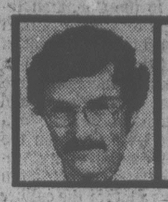

"The man knows baseball—no doubt about that," said Bercovich, an Oakland furniture dealer.

Apart from that, the arrangement would be mutually beneficial financially.

Finley would act as a scout for 10 years, with a $200,000-a-year salary. Hiring him would reduce the original $12 million purchase price of the club to $10 million and would allow the new owners to deduct as a business expense the $2 million paid Finley for scouting, Bercovich said.

Bercovich said Friday, when the sale agreement was announced, that his group "wants to keep the A's in Oakland forever." Plans for a sale earlier this year to a Denver oil magnate fell through over Finley's remaining nine years of lease with the Oakland Coliseum.

OUTDOORS
stewart lang

Barry Thornton, founding chairman of the Steelhead Society of B.C., has come up with a definitive work on the art of steelhead angling entitled Steelhead: The Supreme Trophy Trout.

Published in Victoria by Hancock House, the book contains over 100 black and white photos and costs $14.95.

Shortcomings are few and the strong points of the book make Steelhead an excellent choice as a Christmas present for the angler in your family.

His bond with the sport shows plainly in his descriptive phrases about the power of these sea-run rainbow trout.

"It is an awesome power that will whip any rod into a complete bow in a fraction of a second. The steelhead's incredible size magnifies itself when he leaps, spraying columns of water upwards and making waves that rock the very banks of the stream."

Thornton covers a variety of topics — the life history of steelhead, including both winter and summer-run fish; a definition of steelheading terms; various methods of angling for this splendid fish; wading techniques; steelheading for the beginner; a sampling of Vancouver Island steelhead streams; management principles; the Salmonid Enhancement Program and its relationship to steelhead; and the effects of commercial fishing on the sport.

"Truly, it is the lure of the river more than any other factor that draws the early steelheader to 'his' stream and 'his' pools. It is the vivacious animated water — the variable flows, volatile and fickle — the multiple signs and multi-faceted delicacy of wildlife — the challenging power of the current — the undulating streambank. This is the appeal of the river. To each angler its embrace is individual and unique, and it has an eternal hold on the ardent steelheader."

He also draws an interesting parallel between the fisherman and fish.

"The longing to return to the river grows irresistably as the angler watches every change and shift in the weather, waiting for that perennial moment when his instinct and passion drive him once again to favorite holts."

In sum total, Thornton's work is unsurpassed. But the inevitable weak spots do show up.

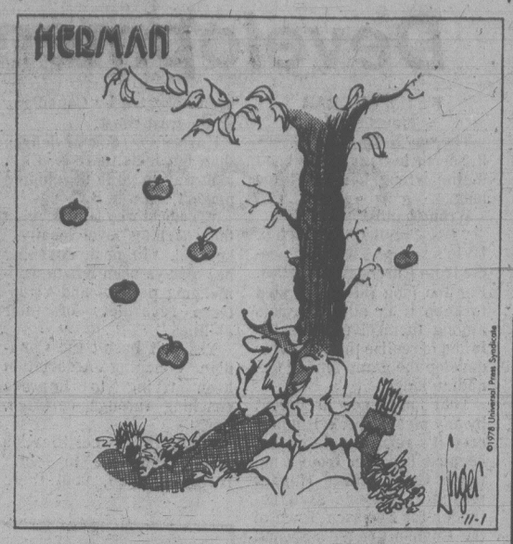

A few simple illustrations to show various types of steelheading rigs would have furnished beginners with a lot of information in relatively little space. In addition, word definitions might have been supplimented by artwork to show the sections of water where steelhead tend to lie.

Thornton, an elementary school principal in Comox, has concentrated his stream data on the familiar (to him) mid-Island area — the Big Qualicum, Browns, Eve, Gold, Little Qualicum, Oyster, Puntledge, Quinsam and White rivers.

In dealing with such a small geographical unit as Vancouver Island, however, a bit more specific information on the San Juan, Cowichan, Nanaimo and Nimpkish systems — to name a few — might have been appropriate.

But the omissions don't really detract from what is presented in the book.

Strictly in terms of background knowledge of the species, the specific information on the streams covered and insights into the problems involved with ensuring a never-ending supply of these magnificent fish, the book is worth far more than the asking price.

"You wait! As soon as someone discovers gravity, they'll all come down and hit the ground."

O'CONNOR HANDED THE PERILOUS JOB

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — San Francisco 49ers fired Pete McCulley as head coach on Tuesday and promoted assistant Fred O'Connor to the perilous job on an interim basis.

It was the 49ers' fourth coaching change in three years.

"We felt a change had to be made, and right now, not at the end of the season," said team owner Edward DeBartolo Jr., who with general manager Joe Thomas, decided after last Sunday's 38-20 National Football League loss to Washington Redskins that McCulley must go.

"McCulley wasn't fired on the basis of his record," said Thomas, but he went into no details of any other reasons for the firing.

Development Canada Soccer Problem

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

The way Brian Hughes sees it, soccer in Canada has been in the wrong hands for too long.

Wrong hands?

"Yes," replied the coach of UVic's soccer Vikings, "people from European countries. For too long they've tended to keep it in ethnic groups among themselves. They've failed to realize they've got to develop the game among Canadian kids."

That's not a new argument by any means, but in Hughes' case it's refreshingly candid because it comes from a native of Great Britain. Hughes played 11 seasons as a defender for Swansea Town of the English League's Second Division before moving to Victoria in 1969 as playing-coach for the old Vic Royals.

"The game has been in Canada for years," Hughes continued "and yet development here is far behind other countries. What really burns me is that soccer is ideally suited to Canada."

But while that charge may be true of soccer in eastern Canada, surely the game has been accepted by Canadians on the west coast.

Hughes acknolwledges that, but feels there is still a long way to go in developing players, even in B.C.

"The best way is to develop the coaching level locally," he said. "In past, coaching has always been left to well-meaning parents and volunteers regardless of their abilities."

Yes, but hasn't the Canadian Coaching Association been trying to improve coaching through certification?

"They have certification levels from one to four," Hughes replied, "but there are still many coaches without even level one certification and most of the others are at either level one or level two. So there's a great need to pass on more knowledge to our coaches."

That will undoubtedly come as soccer gains acceptance in North America.

"It's coming, it really is'" said Hughs, who has his level four papers. "We've got crowds of 75,000 in New York (for Cosmo games in the North American Soccer League) and 30,000 in Vancouver (for the Whitecaps)."

The Viking coach, however, has more vital matters to deal with this week than the calibre of coaching across the country.

He and his assistant, George Smith, have a team heading to the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union championship tournament in Montreal Nov. 9-11.

This marks the third time in the five years Hughes and Smith have coached the Vikings that UVic has won the Canada West University Athletic Association title. That in itself says a lot for the calibre of coaching the Vikings receive.

Hughes feels this year's team is the most experienced he's had at UVic. He loses eight of his regulars, who will either graduate or run out of their five years of playing eligibility.

Among them is Danny Lomas, whom Hughes rates as the best team man he's coached at the school.

Lomas does it all. This year he's the lynch-pin of the defence at centre halfback. Other years he has led the team in scoring as a striker and two years ago, when the Vikings won UVic's only CIAU team championship by beating Concordia University of Montreal in the national final, he was the goalkeeper.

Vikings aren't an especially high-scoring team, so the defence holds the key to their fortunes in Montreal against the five other conference winners.

That puts the onus on keeper Ted Van Waes as well as the midfield line of Secco, Kisic and Stu Holroyd.

Executives Meet To Aid Islanders

Kerry Park Islanders desperately need some player assistance — and the South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League executives are meeting tonight in an effort to find a solution.

The fact that the Mill Bay club is hurting was demonstrated visibly Tuesday night as Saanich Braves downed the Islanders 33-1 in a rout at Pearkes Arena.

Wayne Larsen led the scorefest with six goals while Murray McLaren added five. Tracy Patterson, Bill Adkin and Ed Beauchemin each scored four; Ron Jobson added three; Tom King, who had 11 assists, Scott Connors and Jack Wallis notched two each and a single came from Don McKay.

Randy Bower replied for Islanders.

Rowing Clinic

University of Victoria rowing coach Al Morrow will conduct an invitational clinic, sponsored jointly by the Canadian Olympic Association and the Royal Bank of Canada, for about 100 area school children starting at 10 a.m. Sunday at UVic.

Guidry Shoo-In for Award

NEW YORK (AP) — Ron Guidry, whose 25-3 record produced the best American League winning percentage since 1934, has become the fourth New York Yankees' pitcher to win the Cy Young Award.

The 28-year-old left-hander garnered all 28 first-place votes to become the award's fourth unanimous winner.

Guidry started the season with a 13-game winning streak. He finished with 25 triumphs—15 of them after losses by his team—en route to the top winning percentage—.893—in the AL in 44 years and the best percentage ever for a 20-game winner.

His earned-run average of 1.74 also was an uncontested league high, while his 248 strikeouts in 273 2-3 innings were second only to the 260 recorded by Nolan Ryan of California Angels.

"It was a great season—a season a lot of pitchers dream about," said Guidry. "I don't think it's fully hit yet. I haven't had time to sit down and reflect on what I've been through.

"Maybe it will hit me one morning in the duck blind, when I'm hunting," said the native of Lafayette, La.

The shock may hit him harder than most AL batters did this year. Guidry surrendered just 187 hits in helping New York to its second consecutive World Series title. Mixing a magical potion of sliders with his smoking fastball, he walked just 72 batters in his 35 starts.

Mike Caldwell of Milwaukee Brewers was second, collecting 25 second-place votes and one third. Jim Palmer of Baltimore Orioles, a three-time Cy Young winner, was third.

Other Guidry highlights this year included an 18-strikeout game against the Angels on June 17; a club record nine shutouts; a club record for strikeouts—Jack Chesbro struck out 239 in 1904, and the victory in the Yankees' 5-4 triumph over Boston Red Sox in the one-game playoff that won New York the AL East title.

Previous winners of the American League Cy Young award (prior to 1967, only one award, covering both leagues, was presented) follow:

1977—Sparky Lyle, New York
1976—Jim Palmer, Baltimore
1975—Jim Palmer, Baltimore
1974—Catfish Hunter, Oakland
1973—Jim Palmer, Baltimore

Royal Brougham Dies at 84

SEATTLE (AP) — Royal Brougham, who joined the Seattle Post-Intelligencer in 1910 as a sports copy boy and eventually became sports editor, is dead at 84.

Brougham died early Monday in hospital after suffering a heart attack during the closing minutes of the Seattle-Denver football game on Sunday.

"After 58 years, 10 million words, 600,000 miles and a zillion thrills, this frosty-eyed typewriter-thumper is changing gears," Brougham said in 1968 when he retired as sports editor.

"Giving up a sports editorship isn't easy. It's been a vacation with pay, a free-loader for a half a century. What a ride," he said

Born in Chicago, Brougham grew up in Seattle. After 10 years at the P-I, Brougham replaced Portus Baxter as sports editor.

Baxter, who had joined the staff in 1898, was kept on the staff by Brougham at $5 a week. When Baxter died in 1962, he left Brougham $300,000.

"Whoever heard of a sports writer who could add up to that much anyway," Brougham said when he received the inheritance. Brougham used the money to set up a charity foundation for needy students.

In 1923, Brougham was named managing editor but he resumed the sports editor post in 1928, a job he held until he was named an associate editor in 1968.

CANADIANS DO POORLY

LAKE KARAPIRO, N.Z. (CP) — Except for one crew, Canada's entries in the world rowing championships will be battling Thursday in the repechages to try to advance further in the competition.

The Canadian women's pair entry of Betty Craig of Brockville, Ont. and Susan Antoft of Halifax, N.S., were bronze medallists in the event last year and thus have a bye into Saturday's final.

However, the other seven Canadian men's and women's crews finished behind the winners of their respective heats and must compete in the repechage or second-chance heats on Thursday.

The best showing of the day for Canada was by the women's eights who finished third in their heat behind the strong Soviet and East German crews. The Soviets' heat-winning time was 2:59.20. The East Germans had 3:03.84 and Canada 3:05.94—almost nine seconds faster than the winning time for the other heat.

"Our eight rowed well today," said national coach Alan Roaf of Toronto. "But it is difficult to judge how fast the crews in the other heat are because they rowed in a headwind we didn't have.

"Unquestionably, though, the Russians are the favorite in the women's eight now. They are huge and strong."

The other three women's crews finished fourth in their respective heats—single sculls, double sculls and coxed fours.

The three men's crews could fare no better.

The coxless pairs entry was fourth, the coxed pair fifth and the coxless four sixth. They will compete in the repechage where the top three advance to the semi-finals. Men's finals are Sunday.

East European crews dominated the opening day of the 28-country competition before a crowd of 22,000.

Cloutier Leads Nordique Rally

EDMONTON (CP) — Real Cloutier, sometimes described as the unsung star of the World Hockey Association, scored two goals to help Quebec Nordiques to a 5-4 comeback victory over the slumping Edmonton Oilers before 8,197 spectators Tuesday night.

Cloutier picked up three points on the Oilers' home ice, including his 12th and 13th goals, increasing his career points total to 459 in only 302 games.

For the Oilers it was the fourth straight loss, all of them on home ice, and dropped them into sixth place in the seven-team league. Quebec jumped into fourth place, past the Birmingham Bulls.

Cloutier provided the tying third-period goal which opened the way for Quebec centre Serge Bernier to score the winner with less than four minutes remaining.

Here's The Book On Ron's 19 Years

TORONTO (CP) — Saskatchewan Roughriders completed their 1978 Canadian Football League schedule on Sunday and gave the league statisticians an early opportunity to recap the record highlights of 19-year veteran Ron Lancaster.

Lancaster turned 40 two weeks ago and his 19 complete seasons is a record for CFL quarterbacks.

Among his other most notable league records:

Most passes thrown—6,233

Most completed passes—3,384

Most yards passing—50,535

Most touchdown passes—333

Most games throwing passes—279

Most consecutive games throwing passes—110

Most games throwing 20 or more passes—173

Most games throwing 30 or more passes—277

Most games completing 20 or more passes—32

Most games passing for 200 or more yards—115

Most games throwing one or more touchdown passes—197

Most games throwing two or more touchdown passes—93

Among other highlights, Larry Key of British Columbia Lions and Jim Sykes of Calgary Stampeders both joined the 1,000-yard rushing club.

Key ran for 87 yards against Toronto Argonauts and ran his season total to 1,044 while Sykes added 92 yards against Winnipeg for a total of 1,020.

They join Mike Strickland of Saskatchewan who earlier hit the 1,000 mark and wound up the season with 1,036. Others within range of 1,000 are Winnipeg's Jim Washington who needs 45 yards and Jim Germany of Edmonton Eskimos who made 125.

IRISH RUGBY TEAM JOLTS ALL-BLACKS

LIMERICK, Ireland (Reuter) — Munster crushed the New Zealand Rugby Union All Blacks 12-0 on Tuesday. It was first defeat for an All Blacks team in Ireland since the inaugural tour of 1905.

Ward dropped two goals and added a conversion after starting a move that produced a try by flanker Christy Cantillon in the 11th minute.

Ali Against Rossman Latest in Title Fights

NEW YORK (AP) — Muhammad Ali could defend the world heavyweight boxing title against light heavyweight champion Mike Rossman in a fight "that is being discussed but is a long way from being finalized," promoter Bob Arum says.

"I have had discussions with Ali and Herbert Muhammad (Ali's manager), with Rossman's people and with a certain television network," said Arum. "There is a better than 50 per-cent chance of the fight taking place."

Should an agreement be reached, Ali and Rossman would meet in Buenos Aires at the end of Februrary or early in March, Arum said.

The promoter said that Ali would be getting the greatest purse he's had since he's been in boxing—more than $6 million—and Rossman would get $1 million."

It had been reported that Arum, who has promotional ties to both fighters, also would make $1 million, but he said: "Arum would settle for $750,000."

Larry Holmes is holder of the World Boxing Council title.

Rossman also is a WBA champion, having won that group's light heavyweight title by stopping Victor Galindez in the 14th round on Sept. 29 in New Orleans, the same night Ali won the heavyweight title for the third time by outpointing Leon Spinks.

The 21-year-old Rossman will defend his 175-pound division title against European champion Aldo Traversaro of Italy at the Spectrum in Philadelphia, Dec. 5.

TRANSPLANT A SUCCESS

PEKING (Reuter) — Chinese scientists have successfully transplanted an embryo from one cow to another and a healthy calf has been born.

The experiment was part of research into techniques to improve Chinese cattle herds by increasing the birth of better breeds, the New China News Agency reported.

The female calf was conceived in one cow by artificial insemination with frozen semen. The fertilized ovum was then surgically removed and transplanted to the fallopian tube of another cow of a different breed, where it developed normally until it was delivered.

SIN Number Use Encourages Fraud: Tory MP

OTTAWA (CP) — Widespread use of social insurance numbers increases the opportunities for cheating social welfare programs, Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) told the Commons Tuesday.

He rejected statements by Health Minister Monique Begin last week that the number should be used by all government social services to cut down on fraud.

The minister, answring charges that the number is being used now as a sort of identification card, said that it will be used in computers in more and more departments.

"Has she seen the statistics on the types of cases involving cheating of unemployment insurance such as cases of people holding 50 or 60 (social insurance number) cards?

"With the insistence on the social security number, the value of the card increases and greater and greater reliance is placed upon it as the true means of identification.

"Then it becomes an absolute sinecure to cheat the UIC in any manner that can be devised."

Lambert was speaking during debate on his own private member's bill to do away with the requirement for producing a social insurance number on forfeiting 25 per cent of the interest when cashing in savings bonds.

Time alloted for such discussion expired before the bill could come to vote.

When the government introduced social insurance numbers in 1964, it assured Canadians the card bearing number would not become a total identity card.

Opposition MPs argued that it has become just that, being issued to new-born babies in some provinces, and required of children playing hockey in other places.

Lambert said the 25-per-cent saving-bond "penalty" is unfair because having a social insurance number was not a condition of sale of the bonds.

"This is sheer confiscation, and I say it is unjust."

Ross Milne (L—Peel, Dufferin-Simcoe) denied this is a penalty. It is a "pre-payment" of income tax on bonds interest.

In advocating greater use of social insurance cards as identity cards, the government seems to be more concerned about bureaucratic efficiency than human rights, said Eudore Allard (SC—Rimouski).

Canadians should get used to identity cards, said Alan Martin, parliamentary secretary to finance minister Jean Chretien.

"We are living in a computer age whether we like it or not."

The government should stop requiring social insurance numbers for everything until it smooths out the kinks in its system for issuing the numbers, said John Ellis (PC—Hastings).

Business Against Tax Cuts

OTTAWA (CP) — Tax cuts, though politically attractive, will not bring about the economic recovery the country needs, the Canadian Federation of Independent Business told Finance Minister Jean Chretien Tuesday.

A delegation from the federation, which represents 51,000 small and medium-sized businesses, met Chretien for half an hour to present recommendations for the upcoming federal budget.

Spokesmen urged Chretien to resist the temptation to stimulate the economy by means of across-the-board tax cuts, which other influential organizations such as the Economic Council of Canada and the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, have advocated.

They said such a move would only encourage people to buy more exports, aggravating the county's current account imbalance, weakening the Canadian dollar and driving up interest rates.

A major tax cut would also increase the already high federal deficit without generating the magnitude of growth the government seeks, the small businessmen warned.

The federation recommended, instead, that the government be more selective in its stimulation efforts, focussing on the small business sector. It said small firms deserved such assistance because they are the strongest source of job creation in the economy. The federation gave the minister statistics showing that 72 per cent of the jobs created in the private sector between 1969 and 1977 came from companies with less than 20 employees.

"We point to this data not for the purposes of casting scorn on large firms or to glorify the contribution of small firms," said the brief.

The federation called for three specific policy initiatives aimed at encouraging the growth of small business enterprises:

Venture Capital Soon?

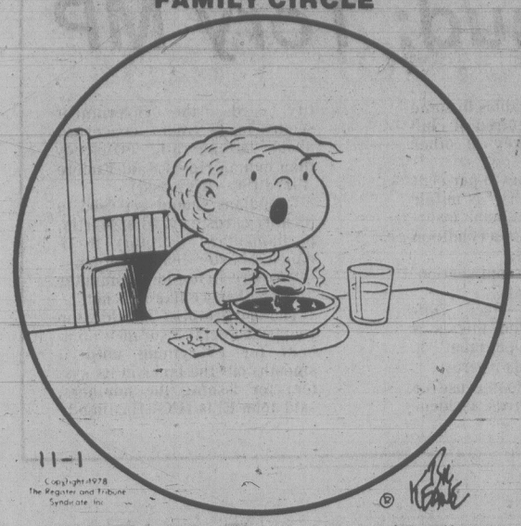

WASHINGTON (CP) — A proposal for freeing more venture capital for small Canadian business should be ready for cabinet approval later this month, Tony Abbott, Canada's minister of state for small business, said here Tuesday.

He was commenting after meeting with U.S. congressional officials and with the U.S. small business administration over the past two days. They were mainly sessions to pick up ideas for Canadian authorities to use in stimulating small business activity, he indicated.

Last May, Abbott published proposals for establishing privately-owned venture enterprise investment companies licensed by the federal government to supply equity financing for small companies. They would offer equity financing guaranteed 90 per cent by the federal government for small businesses that wanted to expand or modernize under Abbott's original proposal.

Abbott said Tuesday a proposal dealing with these areas will be ready for cabinet in November, and added there is a possibility legislation to implement the scheme might come before Parliament in the current session.

The Bridge Expert

In today's deal there was plenty of scope for dueling between declarer and the defenders. The hand was played during the Fifth World Pair Olympiad held this June.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 NT	Dble.	Pass	2 ♡
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♠.

A few words on the bidding are in order. North's double announced, in theory, a hand that rated to be at least the equivalent of West's opening bid. Had South possessed six or more high-card points, he would have passed. His two-heart bid, therefore, showed a poor hand — and North correctly passed this response.

After leading his ace of spades, West played his remaining spade to trick two, the trick being won by dummy's queen. The queen of diamonds was played next, West taking the trick with his ace. East returned a spade, which west ruffed.

West then cashed the diamond king, after which he played the ace of clubs. Had declarer been a mechanical player, he would have followed suit with the five of clubs from dummy. When West would next lead another club, dummy's king would be forced to win the trick — and South would be unable to enter his own hand to finesse against West's king of hearts. And so he would lose a heart trick and incur a one-trick set.

But when West led the club ace, South did not play dummy's five of clubs — he played the queen. If West now led a diamond, South would win the trick with the jack. He would then take a successful heart finesse. And if, instead, west led the club, South would play low from dummy and win the trick with his ten. And, again, a successful heart finesse would then follow.

Actually, South's "unblocking" of the club queen was called for, for North-South had 20 high-card points between them, and East had five. Thus West had to have the club jack for his opening bid.

We have 4467 for the game today. Two 4's, one 6, and one 7. Using all four each time, but no other digits at all, you form expressions for the consecutive numbers from one up.

Any arithmetical signs may be used, but no summation or factorial symbols, and no words. For example, 46 + 7 - 4 is a solution for 49.

The limit without a break in continuity seems to be 138. I shall be glad to check solutions, and will send hints to help in future games if requested.

Higgitt Red Inks Papers Showing Ministers Knew

OTTAWA (CP) — Retired RCMP commissioner W. L. Higgitt identified six confidential documents Tuesday that he said support his assertion that former solicitors-general knew Mounties would sometimes have to break the law in the course of their duties.

But although the documents were shown to the McDonald royal commission on RCMP wrongdoing, their contents were not publicly released.

The commission must decide after hearing arguments in closed-door sessions still to come whether their publication might endanger national security.

Higgitt's surprise statement came during his fourth day of testimony before the commission, which is attempting to discover what senior RCMP officials and their political superiors knew about a number of illegal and questionable RCMP activities during the early 1970s.

Higgitt was commissioner from October, 1969, until he retired in December, 1973.

Higgitt was questioned closely by commissioner Guy Gilbert about an RCMP policy to stand behind Mounties—with legal and financial support—if caught and convicted of breaking the law in an RCMP operation.

Higgitt said last week he was certain the policy had been discussed with the three former solicitors-general he served under during his term—George McIlraith, Jean-Pierre Goyer and Warren Allmand. He could not recall specific discussions.

Goyer and Allmand have denied any knowledge of RCMP lawbreaking. McIlraith, now a senator, has refused comment.

Pressed by Gilbert Tuesday to explain how he was so certain, Higgitt replied that he was relying on his memory and "one or two" documents that would be shown to the commission.

He was then handed a bundle of 14 confidential documents tabled before the commission last week—as well as four others shown to the commission Tuesday—and asked to indicate what sections backed up his case.

He spent more than 15 minutes reading through them, marking and initialling them with a red pen supplied by commission chairman, Justice David McDonald. He eventually marked six documents.

Asked by McDonald what he was claiming the marked sections of the documents showed, he replied that they indicated that they showed there had been discussions with ministers about certain RCMP activities.

He said that while he hesitated to label these activities as illegal, since this was for someone else to determine, the documents showed "that they were not done without the general knowledge, at least, of the political masters."

He said there were other documents "besides those which I saw this morning," which support his testimony.

But under further questioning by Gilbert, Higgitt was vague about whether ministers were told about specific activities.

Food Price Rise Stirs NDP Anger

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Deputy Prime Minister Allan MacEachen was accused in the commons Tuesday by irate NDP leader Ed Broadbent of treating rising food prices as a joke. The angry exchange occurred during the question period when Broadbent said that the Anti-Inflation Board had reported that inflation in food prices is having an effect again with a 1.9 per cent increase in the past month, and a year-over-year increase of 16.5 per cent.

The NDP leader said he had in his possession a secret cabinet document dated June 20 which Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Warren Allmand had reportedly played a role in producing. He said it set out a number of possibilities for government action to cope with rising food prices.

They included special indexing, tariff cuts and consumer subsidies. He asked Allmand what action if any the cabinet had taken in view of the revival of inflationary pressures in respect to food.

Allmand said he had been making representations to the cabinet and to others with respect to food prices and food quality. He said in many cases the suggestions were accepted, but sometimes they were not.

Broadbent said the minister had demonstrated by his reply that he had little or no influence. He said it was apparent the government had done nothing. He asked MacEachen what steps the cabinet had taken in light of the recommendations in the cabinet document.

He said MacEachen was sitting in the house with a "benign expression on his face."

MacEachen with a broad smile said the question had erased whatever expression he might have had on his face.

He said Broadbent would not find him authenticating any cabinet document by falling into the trap of the NDP leader's question.

Broadbent snapped in reply that the deputy prime minister had better return to Rome to get some advice on how to deal with serious matters. (MacEachen led the Canadian delegation to Rome for the installation of Pope John Paul II)

External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson shouted across to Broadbent that the NDP leader should go to Rome "and learn some humility."

Broadbent said the subject of food prices concerned the consumers in this country even if it did not concern the government.

He noted that the secret cabinet document said food prices are to remain an important economic problem for the next 12 months. This was realized by the government last June, according to the document.

"Is the deputy prime minister telling us that since then nothing has been done and the government can just laugh about it? Or does it intend to take some action," he asked.

MacEachen relied the government has already taken some action. He recalled that last week it sent to committee amendments to the Old Age Security act which would help to cushion the effects of inflation upon the most needy of the old age pensioners.

Dr. Shute Dies at 73

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Vere Shute, a city doctor who pioneered research into vitamin E, died Tuesday after a lengthy illness. He was 73.

Dr. Shute first used the vitamin, discovered in 1922, in his obstetrical practice in London in 1934. In 1948 he and a brother, Dr. Wilfrid Shute, founded the Shute Institute for Clinical and Laboratory Medicine, also in London.

PROFIT BOMBED

BEIRUT (AP) — Lebanon's national Middle East Airlines has lost $17 million so far this year, airline officials said. The company did not explain why it lost money, but sources said it was because of the fighting this year between Lebanese Christian militiamen and Syrian troops sent to this country two years ago to end Lebanon's civil war.

Good Buddies Stretch Across The Border

TORONTO (CP) — A distress call received by the Ontario Provincial Police detachment in Burlington, Ont., resulted in a Wendover, Utah, man being rescued by state police, an OPP spokesman said Tuesday.

The spokesman said Constable John McNall and citizen's band dispatcher Mike Cobb were listening to the detachment's CB radio last Friday night when they received a distress call from a man whose pickup truck was stuck in sand in a deserted area near the Utah-Nevada border.

The information was passed on to the RCMP's central computer, where it was relayed to the United States.

HOLD IT - PSAC

OTTAWA (CP) — The Public Service Alliance of Canada has urged the federal government to reconsider plans to sell its forest products laboratories in Vancouver and Ottawa to private interests.

A spokesman for Environment Minister Len Marchand said the minister is studying reports on the feasibility of letting private enterprise take over the laboratories and will make an announcement later.

The alliance, in a special brief to all members of Parliament, said "forests are crucial to the economy of our country."

Research done by the federal government laboratories is "essential for the best utilization of those forests."

The laboratories employ about 250.

Only 8,000 Jobs From Credit Plan

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's employment tax credit program has produced only 8,000 new jobs so far, well short of the 50,000 target set last fall, Employment Minister Bud Cullen admitted in the Commons Tuesday.

The $100 million program, first announced in the Oct. 20, 1977, mini-budget by Finance Minister Jean Chretien, aimed at producing jobs through tax reductions to businesses promising to create new employment.

But some businessmen, especially in the small business sector, complained that the program required too much red tape.

Cullen, under questioning in the Commons from Sinclair Stevens (PC—York-Simcoe), said the government had identified and removed some of the problems. He expected better success in future.

The first year of the two-year program runs to next March 31. The target of 50,000 new jobs applies only to the first year.

Outisde the Commons, Cullen added that the program had worked well only in Quebec.

Cullen said it was "obvious" he would like to have seen more jobs created from the credit plan, which allows employers to deduct from corporate income taxes up to $2 an hour for each new employee.

But he said businesses had made it clear they wanted changes to the plan. The government will start an advertising campaign in the next "couple of weeks," Cullen said, to promote the program.

UIC Maternity Changes

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment insurance laws affecting maternity benefits will be re-examined and recommendations brought to cabinet, Employment Minister Bud Cullen said Tuesday.

Cullen made the statement in a news release issued after the Supreme Court of Canada ruled 7 to 0 that maternity benefits rules do not discriminate against women.

The high court rejected the appeal of Stella Bliss, a Vancouver office worker denied maternity and regular benefits from the Unemployment Insurance Commission. It refused to accept her arguments that UIC maternity rules contravene the federal bill of rights.

Women's rights groups have complained that the UIC should not have the right to dictate when a woman is able to return to work.

Cullen said the restriction on paying regular benefits to new mothers will be reviewed along with other laws affecting maternity benefits. Recommendations would go before cabinet in "the near future."

Women's groups had said the high court decision would set a precedent for many similar cases.

John Nelligan, lawyer for Mrs. Bliss, had argued before the court that discrimination against pregnant women and new mothers was discrimination against all women. Derek Aylen, arguing for the federal government, had contended that the rights, duties and obligations of individuals under the law always vary according to their situations.

Mrs. Bliss said in an interview she was "disappointed, of course, but we're not giving up."

She said she hopes to see the UIC Act changed through federal legislation, adding that support will be sought from womens' organizations throughout Canada.

GOV'T ACCOUNTING METHOD BLASTED BY MACDONNELL

OTTAWA (CP) — Auditor-General J. J. Macdonell says he has reservations about certain federal government accounting policies "which, in my view, affect the fairness of the information presented in the financial statements."

"These reservations relate to balances designated to be deleted from the accounts but reported as assets and liabilities, the effect of excluding certain Crown corporations fro the government accounting entity and the reported value of certain loans, investments and advances."

Macdonell's comments were contained in Volume One of the Public Accounts of Canada, tabled Tuesday in the Commons by Jean-Pierre Goyer, receiver-general for Canada.

He suggested it is inaccurate to describe some expenditures as loans and investments because they will never be repaid.

"Certain Crown corporations have a history of deficits and lack sufficient revenues to repay their indebtedness to Canada. Loans to and investments in these corporations, totalling $1,325 million, are questionable on these grounds.

"The reported value of loans to developing countries and loans to and subscriptions in international development associations, amounting to $2,490 million, is questionable since by their terms these loans and subscriptions have the characteristics of grants or contributions," Macdonell said.

"Under the government's stated accounting policies grants and contributions are recorded as budgetary expenditures rather than assets."

'Forcing Women Out Of Work Force. . .'

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservative David MacDonald said Tuesday that the government's new family allowance proposals are part of an attempt to drive women out of the labor force.

MacDonald, MP for Egmont and Opposition spokesman on women's rights, described the proposals in the Commons as part of "a concerted effort to take women out of the work force...to try to turn back the clock to some previous day and age."

He said the proposals provide an incentive for women to stay home and penalize those who want to work. A refundable tax credit proposed in the plan would be paid to parents on the basis of the annual net family income, discouraging some women from working.

MacDonald said the effort to drive women back to their homes also is seen in continued government statements that the unemployment rate has been driven up by greater numbers of women working.

Two other recent changes he said illustrate the attempt to get women out are abolition of women as a target group in the federal Outreach program to help disadvantaged workers and tying government training allowances to unemployment insurance benefits rates. Since women work in jobs which pay less than men they get lower benefits and thus less training allowance.

MacDonald was speaking during opening debate on legislation which reduces monthly family allowance payments by about $6 to $20 and abolishes a $50 a child tax exemption.

This would be replaced by a refundable tax credit based on income and ranging up to a maximum of $200 a child for families with annual net incomes of $18,000 or less. For every $1,000 more income, the family would lose $50 in tax credit.

Other Opposition MPs rejected descriptions of the plan by Welfare Minister Monique Begin and Finance Minister Jean Chretien who said it is a revolutionary, fundamental and significant change in social welfare policy.

James McGrath, Conservative social policy critic, said the need for the plan shows the government has increased poverty across the country by mismanaging the economy so that inflation and unemployment are no longer in control.

Despite criticisms, Conservative MPs said they would not vote against the bill. Stanley Knowles, New Democratic Party social policy spokesman, urged the government to reconsider the bill because it is proposed at the expense of the middle class.

Knowles said he initially supported the plan, part of the government's $2.5 billion restraint program, because it appeared to transfer income from the wealthy to the poor.

But after study he has concluded it "will put money into the possession of lower-income families but the people who will pay for it are in the middle-income group."

Miss Begin, however, insisted the middle class will continue to benefit from the family allowance and other broad tax benefits and she said the proposals are an attempt "to redistribute the wealth in this country to a certain extent."

"It will hurt some Canadians and help other Canadians," she said.

The government would closely monitor the program and seek opinions from family allowance recipients to see if the rebate should be spread throughout the year instead of paid once a year, Miss Begin said.

Some critics say the rebate should be spread out to three or four payments a year because poor families need the cash flow and will spend the once-a-year rebate paying debts accumulated because monthly benefits are reduced.

THE NEW 1979 MAZDA GLC WAGON HAS AS MANY FEATURES AS THE 1979 GLC AND SOMETHING MORE. MORE SPACE.

For many people, 86 cubic feet of passenger and cargo space in a hatchback is more than enough. That's what the 1979 GLC has. (Other hatchbacks like the Honda Civic can only wish they had that much space.)

But maybe, that's not enough for you.

Maybe you have to carry around more or bigger things than any hatchback will hold. Maybe what you need is a station wagon. But suppose you don't want an enormous, gas-guzzling, hulk-of-a-wagon that's going to take up two lanes on the road.

In that case, we're sure you'll be big on a sub-compact wagon like the new GLC wagon.

It's got 113% more cargo space than the GLC. Yet, the new GLC wagon is only 9" longer. In other words, there's a lot inside for such a small outside.

The new GLC wagon isn't a hatchback in disguise either. It may resemble the GLC somewhat, but it was built to be a wagon. For example, the new GLC wagon weighs more than the GLC, it's 2 inches higher in the back, it has bigger front disc brakes, a bigger gas tank and higher road clearance than the GLC.

And yet, with all these differences, there are similarities.

This year, all 1979 GLC's and GLC wagons have a new higher performance engine. It gives improved acceleration, more pulling power and quieter operation. It also gives excellent gas economy. You can expect to get 6.3ℓ/100 km (72 km/gal.) highway; 8.7ℓ/100 km (52 km/gal.) urban and 7.2ℓ/100 km (63 km/gal.) rating.*

And instead of giving you a long list of options you'd have to pay extra for, the GLC Deluxe and the new GLC wagon give you a long list of standard features which include:

Rear window washer and wiper. Electric rear window defogger. Tinted windows. Trip odometer. Split rear seats. Day/night mirror. Wall-to-wall cut-pile carpeting in both passenger compartment and cargo area. Fully reclining bucket seats. Power assisted front disc brakes...

Just look at what we put into our 1979 GLC wagon. And just think of what you'll be able to.

The 1979 Mazda GLC Hatchback & GLC Wagon.

UIC Redraws Jobless Map To Fine Tune Payments

OTTAWA (CP) — The government Tuesday released a new map of economic regions to tighten links between unemployment insurance benefit payments and the actual job conditions of claimants.

Use of the new map, redrawn to divide the current 16 economic regions into 48 new regions, will generally make access to benefits tougher for urban dwellers and easier for rural residents, said Larry St.-Laurent, unemployment insurance program director.

Unemployment rates in the regions are used to determine how many weeks a person must work to be eligible for benefits and who gets extra benefits when payments based on insurable earnings run out.

The new map, effective Nov. 12, will make administrators "more sensitive to difficulties claimants face locally in finding and keeping work," Employment Minister Bud Cullen said in a statement.

A comparison of the old map and the new map, using September unemployment rates, shows that use of the map will have dramatic effects on claimants in some regions of the country.

Using September figures, the unemployment rate in Fort McMurray would have been slashed under the new map to 4.5 per cent from 25 per cent. Fort McMurray residents would have to work an additional four weeks to get benefits and be entitled to 30 fewer weeks of extra benefits.

In Halifax, residents would have had to work two additional weeks for eligibility and they would be entitled to 18 fewer extra weeks of benefits.

In Sudbury, Ont. claimants would have worked one week less and received four more weeks of extra benefits. But in Quebec City, claimants would have been entitled to 10 fewer weeks of extra benefits.

Unemployment rates are more accurately pinpointed in regions of Newfoundland and Labrador but the rates are so high in each region—at least 15.7 per cent—that residents there would still be eligible after working the minimum 10 weeks and could get the maximum 32 weeks of extra benefits. Use of the new map would have had no effect there.

The government requires 10 to 14 weeks of work, depending on the regional rate.

'Bomber' Jailed Two Months

EDMONTON (CP) — A 40-year-old city man who telephoned a newspaper saying he would wipe out the city with a plutonium bomb unless all drug pushers were sent out of town has been sentenced to two months in jail.

Stephen Hayes was sentenced in provincial court Tuesday for telephoning a threat to The Sun on July 30.

Court was told that after talking to the news desk that day, Hayes spoke to a Sun photographer and listed his demands, including having all drug pushers sent away and a meeting with Premier Peter Lougheed.

UNIFIED BARGAINING FORGED

WINNIPEG (CP) — Government employees in the four Western provinces are putting their heads together to seek a joint bargaining approach in contract negotiations with their respective employers.

An advisory council has been formed to develop a uniform approach on such issues as pensions, dental plans, job security, job classifications and compulsory overtime.

Bill Jackson, president of the Manitoba Government Employees Association, said Tuesday he hopes the council will be in a position to make recommendations to provincial employees' associations in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia within eight weeks.

Sixth Man, 'Mr. X' A Cross Kidnapper?

MONTREAL (CP) — Journalist Marc Laurendeau says a sixth person was involved in the October, 1970, Front de Liberation du Quebec kidnapping of British trade commissioner James Cross, but that his name may never be revealed.

Laurendeau, editorial page editor of the French-language daily tabloid Montreal-Matin, is author of what he calls "the real story" of Quebec's October Crisis of 1970 in the November issue of the French monthly L'Actualite.

Laurendeau said Monday both police and the Quebec Justice department are aware of the identity of "Mr. X" —as he calls him in the L'Actualite story—but that he has never been prosecuted or even interrogated.

Mr. X is a socialist-leaning teacher living somewhere in the province with his wife and child, Laurendeau says.

The Parti Quebecois government now is conducting its own inquiry into the events of the October Crisis.

Laurendeau says the mysterious Mr. X may be unmasked in a forthcoming report on the inquiry, being conducted by justice department lawyer Jean-Francois Duchaine, but he is skeptical.

Asked in a brief interview if he knew the identity of Mr. X, Laurendeau replied: I cannot say."

In his article based on 10 hours of taped interviews in Paris with exiled Cross kidnappers Jacques and Louise Cossette-Trudel, Laurendeau says Mr. X was the man who got Cross medicine he needed.

He says Mr. X never was prosecuted or questioned by police, although his activities were well known and although he apparently tried to resurrect the FLQ in 1971, a year after Cross and Quebec labor minister Pierre Laporte were kidnapped in separate incidents.

Pressures on Dollar Surprise to Gov't

OTTAWA (CP) — The government did not expect the strong pressures that drove the value of the dollar down last spring and summer, Finance Minister Jean Chretien said Tuesday.

Chretien, appearing before the Commons finance committee to defend a bill that asks Parliament for authority to borrow $7 billion, also said he hoped to announce a budget date later this week or early next week. The budget would be within three weeks.

Chretien told the committee the $7 billion was needed to cover extensive foreign borrowing by the government since last March. The money raised has been added to the country's reserves and used to defend the dollar.

Lat March, Chretien told the Commons that the government had sufficient borrowing authority to provide for its needs in the 1978-79 fiscal year.

But sine then, the government has drawn on standby credit arranged with Canadian and U.S. banks, floated two $750 million U.S. bond issues in New York and borrowed 1.5 billion West Grman marks worth $806 million Canadian. The total cost is $5.4 billion.

"The $7 billion supplementary borrowing powers now being sought will compensate for the use of outstanding borrowing authorities emanating fron these foreign borrowings," Chretien said. "It will also provide some margin to cover possible drawings on the remaining $3.1 billion U.S. standby lines of credit."

Chretien said the government initially arranged the credits to show money traders that the government had resources to cope with speculation against the dollar.

"We didn't expect to have to use it then," he said.

But much of the credits had to be used as a weak trade performance last summer and increasing U.S. interest rates put added pressure on the Canadian dollar.

Sinclair Stevens, Progressive Conservative finance critic, said he found Chretien's explanation hard to believe because by last May, the government had borrowed $3.9 billion.

Stevens asked Chretien in the committee if the government would consider selling some of its assets to raise money.

The British had sold assets $1.4 billion worth from British Petroleum when the pound was in trouble, he said. Why not sell off assets of Petro-Canada worth $551 million or the Canada Development Corporation worth $322 million, he said.

Chretien said the government was not considering selling them.

Paid $2,500 For Kidnap Role: Witness

MONTREAL (CP) — Rene Chalifoux testified Tuesday he was paid $2,500 by Claude Valence for his part in the kidnapping of Sherbrooke credit union employee Charles Marion.

Chalifoux told a Quebec Superior Court jury Valence promised him $50,000 to pick up "a package" during a conversation at Valence's cottage several weeks before Marion was abducted on Aug. 6, 1977.

"I thought the deal was that I just had to pick up a package," Chalifoux said. "It was only when we were in the cottage and the man known as Pierre told Mr. Marion and the woman with him to lie on the floor that I realized that something was wrong."

Chalifoux was testifying at the trial of Valence and his wife Jeanne, who are charged with conspiring to kidnap Marion, kidnapping him, forcibly detaining the loans manager for 82 days, attempted extortion and extortion.

Chalifoux said he asked Valence if the "package" had anything to do with drugs or alcohol and Valence replied, "the equivalent."

Valence told Chalifoux he would have to act as an escort on a trip of about 30 kilometres, the approximate distance from the Valence's cottage at Lac Aylmer, in the Eastern Townships, to the U.S. border, he said.

Chalifoux, a heavy equipment operator, was to have been paid $50,000 a few days after the trip, he said.

He said he took a day to consider the offer and then agreed. He testified that if he had known that he would become involved in the kidnapping of Marion he would never have gotten mixed up in the affair.

Before testifying Chalifoux was granted the protection of the court under the Canada Evidence Act by Superior Court Justice Marc Beauregard.

Chalifoux faces kidnapping and extortion charges but is expected to be tried in Sherbrooke with De Varenne and Louise Beaubien after the trial here ends.

Shorter Week Push by CLC

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian Labor Congress may involve itself directly in the fight for a shorter work week as part of a growing commitment to social and political concerns, CLC president Dennis McDermott said Tuesday.

McDermott, speaking to the national convention of the Brotherhood of Railway and Airline Clerks, said congress affiliates would first have to approve such a move, but that it would be a logical step in the CLC's evolution.

The congress's general convention last April approved a resolution supporting a reduced work week as labor's contribution to the fight against unemployment.

McDermott said a reduced work week would have to be coupled with restrictions on overtime to assure that the full job-creating potential of the reduction would be realized.

There are ample risks for labor if there isn't a properly conceived and carefully co-ordinated campaign for the shorter week, he said.

For one, the job creation motive would have to be properly explained to the public because, "We will run into the most co-ordinated resistence on the employer side that we've ever seen."

Speaking to reporters following his speech, the CLC president said he would have a tactical plan in mind.

"What I don't want to see is some union get slaughtered on this issue, because then it will go on the back burner for a long time. It would be a harmful precedent for others who may have . . . more collective bargaining clout or who may deal with more affluent corporations.

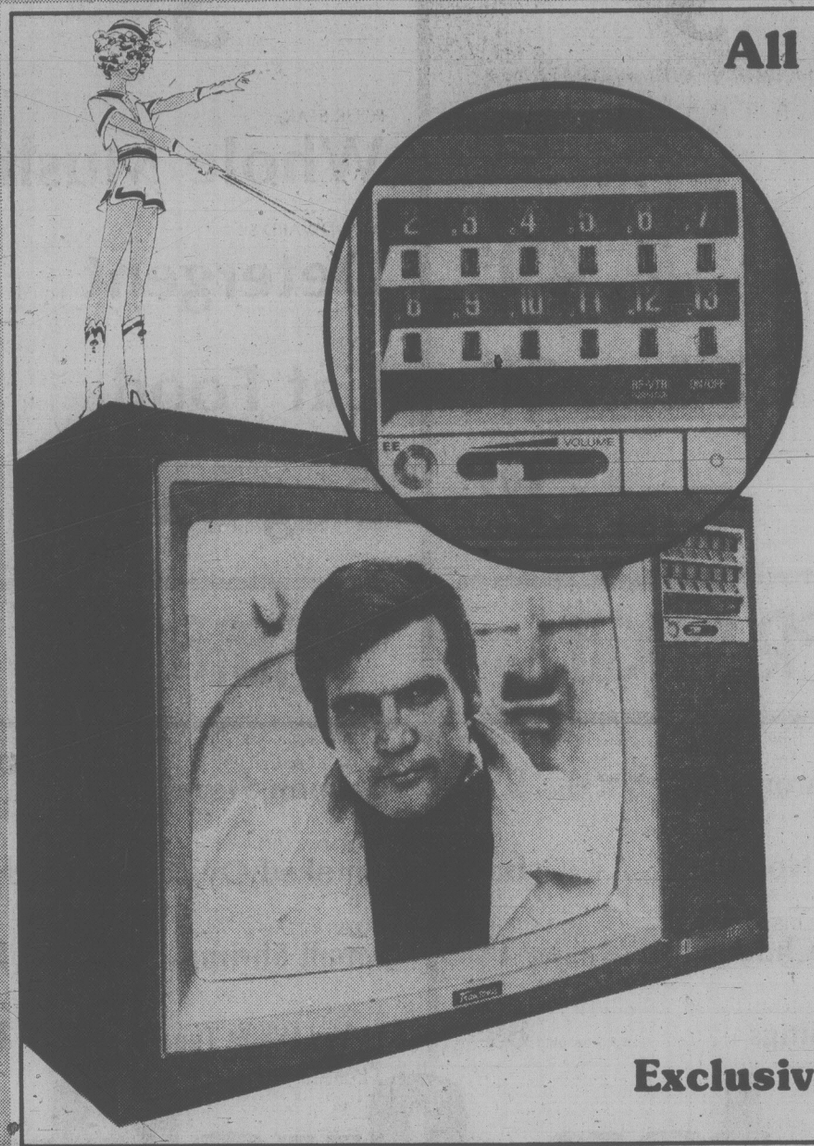

"So we ought to do as we have done for years in the United Auto Workers where I come from, and that is to pick a target and to put total resources, expertise and everything behind it."

When one major company gives in, many others will follow, he added.

At the same time, the CLC would be the logical vehicle through which to approach unions in other countries to get them to follow suit because Canadians wouldn't want to become less competitive in the international marketplace.

He chided critics of Canadian unions who keep pointing to the lower number of strikes in countries such as Japan and West Germany, which have the world's strongest economies.

Unions in those countries aren't as militant or democratic as Canadian unions, and they may not stage as many strikes, he said. But then again, Canadian political and industrial leaders don't walk around fearing attacks by left-wing extremists.

Long Live Salads!

By KAY SPICER

Long live salads, the marvellous mixtures that add a scintillating touch to meals. Fruits and vegetables are the great salad makers — prepared to go-with or stand on their own. Plain and fancy, fall salads fit every occasion, adding spark to winterized appetites.

Apples and pears, carrots and cabbages, are just a few examples from the assortment of winter produce that go into exciting salads bowls. Reasonably priced, these are the ingredients to use when lettuce-like salad greens are more expensive.

Broccoli, cauliflower, brussels sprouts and that good head, the cabbage, are rich in vitamin C. And carrots are Vitamin A champions. So fall and winter salads can be nutritious, colorful and crunchy.

Here are a few of my favorites — perfect with turkey, beef or ham — at ladies' luncheon, a bridge buffet or a family-style meal. Or if you prefer, pass a pretty platter-laden with some snappy relishes. All made ahead of time.

PEAR WALDORF SALAD
Makes 6 to 8 servings

4 pears
1 tablespoon lemon juice Pinch of salt
1 cup chopped celery
½ cup raisins
½ cup chopped walnuts
½ cup mayonnaise or salad dressing

Wash pears. Cut in eights lengthwise; remove core; cut each wedge into pieces. Sprinkle with lemon juice and a pinch of salt. Add celery, raisins and walnuts. Toss with mayonnaise. Chill. Attractive served in glass salad bowl.

SUNSHINE PEARS
Makes 8 servings

4 pears
Lemon juice or ascorbic acid mixture like Fruit-Fresh
1 cup shredded Cheddar cheese
1 cup shredded carrot
1 tablespoon mayonnaise
Fresh grapes

Wash pears. cut in half and remove core. Sprinkle cut surfaces with a little lemon juice or Fruit Fresh. Toss shredded Cheddar cheese, shredded carrot and mayonnaise together to lightly mix. Spoon cheese mixture into hollow (where core was removed) and acros middle of pear halves. Serve on a platter with small bunches of grapes.

BROCCOLI VINAIGRETTE
Makes 6 servings

1 pound fresh broccoli
1 cup bottled oil and vinegar dressing with herbs and spices
¼ cup finely chopped dill pickle
¼ cup finely chopped green pepper
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
2 tablespoons capers, optional
Lettuce
Pimiento, optional

Separate broccoli into branches. Trim ends and peel the stems if they are tough. Cook in about one inch of salted water for about 8 minutes until barely tender. Drain. Combine bottled dressing, pickle, green pepper, parsley and capers, if desired, in a screw-top jar. Shake vigorously to blend. Pour over broccoli. Chill several hours or overnight. Serve on lettuce-lined plate. Garnish with pimiento strips, if desired.

NIPPY CHEESE ONIONS

¾ cup crumbled blue cheese (3 ounces)
½ cup salad oil
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon sugar
Pinch of pepper
4 medium onions, thinly sliced (about 4 cups thin onion rings)

Combine blue cheese, salad oil, lemon juice, salt sugar and pepper. Pour over onion rings in glass dish and chill thoroughly. Serve on relish tray or add to salad.

PICKLED CARROTS

6 6 edium carrots (about 1 pound) scraped and cut into 3-inch lengths
¾ cup sugar
¾ cup vinegar
¾ cup water
1 tablespoon mustard seed
2½ inches stick cinnamon, broken
3 peppercorns

Cook carrots in boiling water for 5 minutes. Drain; cut into thin sticks. Mix sugar, vinegar and water in a saucepan. Tie mustard, cinnamon sticks and peppercorns in a cloth bag. (Use a piece of all-purpose cloth like J-cloth. It's perfect for this job.) Add bag of spices to sugar-water mixture. simmer 10 minutes; pour over carrot sticks, Cool; refrigerate 8 hours or overnight. Drain well before serving as an appetizer or on relish tray.

Massive Doses of Vitamin C May Involve Some Risks

Nutrition Buyline

QUESTION:

Now that the cold season is upon us, is it advisable to take Vitamin C pills? My friend read an article that said that Vitamin C would prevent and cure the common cold. He now takes 10 grams of vitamin C daily. Can this be harmful?

ANSWER:

The recommended daily requirement of vitamin C for adult Canadians is 30 milligrams. This is equivalent to the amount of vitamin C in small glass of orange in the morning or a tomato in a salad in the evening. It is a number of years now since Dr. Pauling's book was published which recommended large doses of vitamin C for the prevention of the common cold. Further research into the effects of large doses of vitamin C have since been reported. Researchers at the University of Toronto showed no effect on the number of colds when vitamin C was taken in large doses to prevent a cold, although some participants reported less severe symptoms.

There is much to be said against taking large doses of vitamin C. Ascorbic acid (vitamin C) in excess is excreted in the urine. Extra amounts place a strain on the kidney, or could lead to the formation of stones in the urinary tract.

High levels of vitamin C taken during pregnancy can be dangerous. Researchers in the U.S. have postulated that infants born to mothers who take massive doses of vitamin C may be born with abnormally high needs for vitamin. If you feel you must take vitamin C tablets to help relieve the symptoms of a cold then restrict your intake to 50 milligrams of vitamin C four times a day. Better still, drink a glass of orange juice or vitaminized apple juice four times a day and you will be getting as much vitamin C.

QUESTION:

I have a lot of parsley in my garden. Is it possible to freeze parsley for use during the winter?

ANSWER:

Yes, you can freeze parsley and it is a welcome addition to soups and stews in the winter. Harvest the parsley in your garden before the early frosts. Wash, trim, and drain the parsley well. Chop on a cutting board until quite fine. Place in a shallow pan such as a jelly roll pan or a nnokie sheet. You must have a very thin layer so that it will freeze quickly. Place in the freezer for 3 or 4 hours, or until frozen. As soon as it is frozen remove from the pan and place in any moisture-vapor proof container or bag. Store in the deep freeze, but keep one container handy in the freezer compartment of your refrigerator to be used in your daily cooking.

QUESTION:

Does gelatin build strong healthy fingernails?

ANSWER:

No, this misconception probably arose from the fact that gelatin is made from hardened animal structures such as bones, and hoofs. Gelatin is an incomplete protein, since it lacks some of the essential amino acids, and therefore cannot supply all the "building blocks" for nails or any other cells.

Although everybody hears and talks so much about heart disease, few people are able to describe the function of the heart or what it looks like.

Your heart is only a bit larger than your fist and weighs less than one pound. Its function is to pump blood to the lungs and all body tissues.

This is some of the basic information gleaned from the illustrated leaflet Your Heart and How It works.

You will also learn that the heart is a hollow organ which is divided by a wall, the septum, into a 'right' and a 'left' heart. The illustration will help you understand the function of each side of the heart.

Actually, the heart is a double pump. One pump, the right heart, receives blood which has come from the body where it has delivered nutrients and oxygen. It pumps this dark blood to the lungs where it gets rid of carbon dioxide and picks up a fresh supply of oxygen. As a result, it regains its bright red color.

Bio-dex

Nov. 2/78
By Ken J. Michaels
Your computerized biorhythm
©BIODEX PRODUCTIONS 1978
Dist. by Toronto Sun Syndicate

HOW TO USE YOUR CHART:

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle- The person you see in the mirror is your best friend. Treat your best friend to something special.

6-10 Neutral Cycle- A little white lie could land you in trouble. Don't compound the error. Own up and take your lumps.

11-15 Positive Cycle- Someone who is part of your life is reaching out to you. Sensitivity today will make contact possible.

The human brain is a miracle of complexity and miniaturization. We still cannot construct a computer that can out-think us, let alone come up with "original" ideas. Trouble is, our thoughts are not always consistent and reliable. When we're tired our calculations sometimes go astray, and some days we just can't seem to think straight at all- If your intellectual Bio-dex is low, forget about adding those numbers in your head — reach for your reliable pocket calculator.

CHEESE N' ONION MUFFINS

(Makes 1 dozen)
2 cups (500 ml.) all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon (15 ml.) baking powder
1 tablespoon (15 ml.) sugar
¼ teaspoon (1 ml.) salt
1 cup (250 ml.) shredded Canadian Cheddar Cheese
1 package (single serving size) instant onion soup mix
1 cup (250 ml.) milk
1 egg
¼ cup (50 ml.) butter, melted

In a large bowl stir together flour, baking powder, sugar and salt. Stir in cheese. Combine instant onion soup mix and milk. Let stand 5 minutes. Beat together egg, milk mixture and butter. Add to dry ingredients all at once and mix lightly until just combined.

Spoon into 12 greased medium sized muffin cups. Bake in preheated 400°F. (200°C.) oven 25 to 30 minutes or until golden.

POTATO LOVERS NOTE
For fluffier, lighter mashed potatoes, try adding a pinch of baking powder as you mash them.

The kind of foods that may help the old boy reach an early end

How To Kill Hubby Legally

Does your husband make you so mad sometimes that you could just throttle him? Well, there is a way to help the old boy reach an early end, and it's all within the legal system, too!

You may be aware that heart disease is the number one killer in Canada. And you've probably heard the old adage, "The way to a man's heart is through his stomach." Well, put two and two together, and you've got your answer. Just feed him the right things, and his risk of a heart attack will go much higher.

Start with plenty of fat — lots of sour cream, butter, gravy and pastries. Large quantities of these foods will help make him overweight, and will likely raise his blood cholesterol as well. Make sure he eats lots of meat, especially the cuts with fat marbled throughout, and — most importantly — fry his food as often as possible.

Serve lots of cakes and other sweet desserts, and put several teaspoons of sugar in each cup of coffee he drinks. Never give him juice, if you can substitute a soft drink. And don't forget to include a few before and after dinner cocktails. That extra alcohol will help him to gain weight even faster.

High intakes of salt have been known to increase blood pressure. And high blood pressure is a known risk factor for heart disease. So get out that salt shaker and use it liberally. Tempt him with pretzels, potato chips, pickles and other salty foods.

Remember not to offer him to many fruits, vegetables, or whole grain products. These foods are altogether too healthy, and you certainly don't want his diet to include much roughage.

Encourage him to have two or three helpings of everything. And if you have a copy of the Canada Food Guide hanging on your cupboard, hide it quickly. He may read it and realize what you're up to!

You'll hasten the whole process if you buy him an extra pack of his favorite cigarettes each day. And by the way, make sure to discourage him if he makes any attempts to take a brisk walk.

There is only one hitch to this whole scheme. Women aren't immune to heart disease, so if you join him and partake of all these things, you just might do yourself in as well.

To prevent your own early end, don't take these suggestions "to heart". Do the opposite!!

NOT WISE TO KEEP STALLING

Dr. L. L. COLEMAN

I've been stalling to have a hernia operation because I am worried about it. Thoughts about it never leave my head. My doctor keeps referring to it an an "elective" operation. Does this mean that it can be put off indefinitely? — Mr. M.K.

Dear Mr. K.: "Elective" surgery is the name given for an operation that has no sense of immediacy or urgency. This means simply that the patient's life is not threatened if there is any delay. Therefore, it can be performed at a time most convenient for the patient and the surgeon.

Sometimes, a patient may choose to have an elective operation during a vacation period, to avoid time off from school or the job.

It is obvious that the repair of a fractured leg or the removal of an acutely inflamed appendix is an urgent operation rather than an elective one.

On the other hand, the repair of a hernia which has existed for a long time and which gives no evidence of complication is a procedure that can be "electively" done at any time. This is the difference between elective and urgent surgery.

Yet, there is another most important factor that must be consiered, even in elective surgery. "Stalling" indefinitely introduces a danger that you should be aware of.

A patient of mine was in the identical situation that you are in and for years kept putting off the hernia opeation that had been "electively" suggested. Last Thanksgiving, at a family reunion, he complained of sudden excruciating pain. Examination showed that a small piece of intestine had suddenly been trapped in the hernial opening.

Now, the elective operation that he had been putting off was converted into an urgent operation. There could no longer be any stalling because he had no choice. The operation became a lifesaving emergency.

Along with such conversion from elective to urgent surgery comes the fact that recovery from the operation is not as rapid and the period of convalescence is much longer. There must be some reasonable amount of time for the waiting period when an operation such as yours is suggested. "Stalling" is not the answer to your problem.

I remember when I was a child I used to bite my nails. My mother put bitter stuff on my nails to keep me from doing it. I need this stuff now because I'm trying to break my 9-year-old son of the same habit. I haven't been able to find it. Do you know what it is? — Mrs. T.E.

Dear Mrs. E.: I'm glad you can't find it because this ridiculous approach to the nail-biting problem has long since been abandoned.

Nail-biting, in children or adults, has for years been accepted as evidence of some inner tension and emotional conflict. It is much wiser to seek the cause of these tensions and try to eliminate it rather than simply trying to break the habit of nail-biting.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: My husband recently bought a very expensive cockatoo. He has a cage for it, but it's hardly ever in the cage because my husband thinks it should have the freedom to fly around the house.

Needless to say, there are bird droppings everywhere! My husband refuses to clean up after the bird, so I have to, and I am tired of the mess. We fight about this constantly. Otherwise, we have a good marriage, but this really keeps me in a bad mood. What can I do? — LYNN.

DEAR LYNN: Give your husband an ultimatum. Either the bird stays IN the cage, or HE cleans up after it. If that doesn't work, keep your windows open a lot, buy a cat, or send me your address and I'll send you a wonderful recipe for stewed cockatoo on toast.

DEAR ABBY: I've read your column for years, but this is my first time to write. When I read your advice to kids to stay in school, I had to write because I am living proof that kids start on a life of crime when they begin skipping school.

I have been in more institutions and group homes than I can count, and right now I'm in jail waiting for my court date. (Armed robbery).

I wish I could tell every kid on the other side of these jailhouse bars, "STAY IN SCHOOL, AND DON'T QUIT NO MATTER WHAT!! Please don't be a high school dropout like me!

You can't get a decent job without a high school diploma. And without a job, all that's left is running the streets and stealing.

I'd also like to tell young kids, "Remember, you have only one mother and father, so mind them! If they punish you for doing wrong it's only because they love you, and want what's best for you."

Please correct my spelling, Miss Abby, and print this. Maybe someone will listen to you. — JESSE.

DEAR JESSE: I'll print your letter in hope that some kids out there will listen to you. Thanks for writing (P.S. I didn't have to correct one word. Your spelling was perfect. God bless you son.)

The Diet Trap For 'Loners'

A lack of interest in food results in the poor habit of existing on a monotonous diet. For some it may be the toast and tea regime; others may turn to bought doughnuts and coffee. These are extreme cases but they do exist. There is a need to regain interest in food for without interest there is no appetite, and without appetite there is certainly no enjoyment and little benefit from the food taken.

It is true there must be a reason for deciding to do something about poor food habits, especially when the situation is experienced by a person living alone. Fortunately not all loners feel the same way about preparing interesting meals. I have known more than one who took great pleasure in planning, preparing and serving totally new gastronomic delights as occasional entertainment for two or three friends.

Once the habit is established one is likely to make some special dish at least once a week, and vary the use of it for two or three days just for one's meal. Or a spree of baking will be a weekly event, making different kinds of food to enjoy through the week.

With the use of a top-of-refrigerator freezer, cookies, buns, coffee cake and fancy breads can be halved for freezing. Thus there is always something available at short notice when time is lacking to make a fresh supply.

Individual needs and tastes vary, but it is possible to regain interest in one's meals by deciding to spend a little time on their preparation.

The making of a simple salad will appeal to many for it may consist of green lettuce leaves, a sliced hard boiled egg and a couple of one-inch squares of Cheddar cheese. Topped with cottage cheese or homemade yogurt this is good and interesting food with a wholewheat bun.

A hot vegetable dish in one saucepan is useful for anyone since it lessens the clean-up time, yet provides high nutrition. A cupful of left-over will be the beginning of a new dish next day.

Here is Vegetable Puree for one serving. Increase as needed for more.

VEGETABLE PUREE for one

2 small or 1 medium potato
1 small onion
1 medium carrot
1 Cup spinach, chard, turnip or beet leaves, or green endive; a mixture of these is even better.

Scrub potatoes, peel very thinly, cut into four pieces. Scrub carrot, slice thinly. Slice skinned onion thinly.

Put all into saucepan with about ¼ cup cold water. Bring to boil and cook for about 20 minutes until all are almost fork tender.

Meanwhile wash green vegetable carefully, dry on clean towel. Cut into pieces and drop into saucepan on top of other vegetables.

Replace lid and boil briskly for five minutes.

Drain liquid off if any remains, reserve for future use.

Have ready a thick slice of wholewheat toast spread with soft margarine and peanut butter.

To make a true puree, the food should be put through a sieve but this is really unnecessary with this dish. It is delicious and nourishing; the toast gives it just the crunchy texture needed. Serves one.

Crisp cookies with a few fruits, nuts, other good ingredients but very little sugar are easy enough to put together, and are a welcome addition to friendly cups of coffee or tea shared with drop-in neighbors and other visitors. some will want your recipe. Here it is.

FRUIT-NUT COOKIES

1 cup soft margarine
¼ cup sugar
2 small eggs
1 cup unbleached flour containing 1 tbsp wheat germ
1 cup wholewheat flour
1 tsp baking powder
¼ tsp baking soda
½ tsp salt
1 cup oat flakes
3 tbsp water
¼ cup skim milk powder
½ cup ground raw peanuts
½ cup chopped raisins or dates

Cream margarine with sugar until soft. Beat in eggs with fork.

Measure and sift in next six ingredients, tossing in wheat germ remaining in sifter.

Stir in oat flakes with the water, and finally add nuts and fruit. Mix well with large wooden spoon until mixture can be moulded together.

With fingers, pinch off small flattened balls of dough; place on lightly greased cookie sheet giving space to spread a little.

Bake in moderate oven 177 deg. C. about 15 minutes or until beginning to color a little. Do not scorch. Makes 3½ to 4½ dozen.

Some of the pleasure of preparing food is anticipating the enjoyment others will get from sharing at least part of it with you. It is something like gardening, writing, painting, or playing a musical instrument, few of us study and practice these arts solely for our own gratification. By sharing them with others even briefly, our pleasure is at least doubled; sharing brings a more lasting satisfaction.

MEAT CAN BE REFROZEN IF THAWED AT ABOUT 32°

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

"Millions of dollars are lost annually because consumers don't understand why meat spoils or how to prevent it," says Prof. Richard J. Epley, an extension meat specialist.

At today's prices, few of us can afford the loss.

Epley says you can easily double the shelf life of fresh meat by setting the refrigerator temperature at 32° F., storing meat in the coldest section and leaving it in the original store wrap, unopened, until you are ready to cook it.

The University of Minnesota meat expert also said frozen, raw meat that has been thawed can be refrozen safely without first cooking it — if a few precautions are observed.

The thawing should be done in the refrigerator at about 32° F. and the thawed meat refrigerated no more than two days before refreezing.

Only the quality suffers from this treatment, he said:

"Each time you thaw it, the meat loses moisture. It becomes a little tenderer, because ice crystals break the meat cells, but the tenderizing effect is counterbalanced by the moisture lost during thawing."

You wouldn't want to refreeze meat three or four times, he said, because too much quality would be lost.

In the professor's view, the long-standing practice of rewrapping meat loosely with waxed paper does more harm than good. The meat may become contaminated through exposure to bacteria in the air, on your hands and/or the countertop, he said.

In addition, loose rewrapping dries out the meat's surface and allows it to absorb off-odors from other foods.

For safety and better quality retention, he recommends leaving the original market wrapping intact if it is transparent flexible plastic, not market paper. Epley said the plastics let oxygen in and prevent moisture from escaping.

Market paper should be replaced with plastic wrap, Epley said, but be sure it is not marked freezer wrap, which is air-tight.

All fresh raw meat contains some surface bacteria, he said, despite strict sanitary controls from the packing plant to your kitchen. Low temperatures slow down the bacterial growth that leads to spoilage.

A fresh cut is purplish-red. Cutting or grinding exposes the beef to oxygen, which turns the meat bright red on the surface, purplish-red inside.

In the third step, packaged ground beef often will have a bright red surface, a brown ring just below and a purplish-red core. Epley said the ring is caused by a small amount of oxygen infiltration, and it is harmless. Left uncovered 30 minutes, the purplish core will become bright red.

It is still safe, he said, if the ground meat has a bright, red surface and brownish-red interior or is brownish red throughout.

Beef in the third through fifth stages will not taste as good as the purplish-red or the bright red and purplish red combination, he said. While beef that is brownish-red is edible, it isn't the best-tasting, and it should be cooked to the well-done stage before eating, Epley said.

Meat that looks green or yellow should be thrown out.

A Far Cry From Foie Gras

By PIERRE FRANEY

In the hierarchy of food there is no doubt that sausages, in general, are what can be called food for the masses, or a peasant concept in food preparation. It is true that sausages are a far cry from foie gras and caviar, but I have yet to meeet a connoisseur of cooking or eating who doesn't frequently feel a well-defined hunger for what are called, in my place of birth, saucisses de porc, or pork sausages.

In my Burgundy childhood we were often served sausages at the family meal. It never occurred to me then that one reason was not only the fact that they tasted good; they were also a budget item in that country hamlet where I lived.

One of my favorite preparations was sausages cooked and served with a light tomato sauce (generally of fresh tomatoes) and rice. This was a considerable change from the usual grilled sausages with mashed potatoes or sausages cooked with sauerkraut and white wine (two dishes that remain, to this day, personal favorites).

The dish can be prepared without strain within one hour, although it does inclued three separate but easily made components: the sausages, which are simply put into the oven to grill; a hasty tomato sauce and the rice. There is a plus in the fact that the dish can be served as a complete meal.

The logical way to prepare the dish is to put the sausages on to cook in the oven, proceed to the rice, which requires slightly in excess of 15 minutes to prepare, and then do the tomato sauce.

SAUCISSES AU RIZ
(Baked sausages with rice)

- 3 sweet or hot Italian sausages, or a combination of both, about two pounds
- 4 tablespoons butter
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
- 1 clove garlic, finely minced
- 1 bay leaf
- 1 cup rice
- 1½ cups chicken broth
- 1½ cups dry white wine
- 2 cups fresh tomato sauce, see recipe

1. Preheat the oven to 400 degrees.

2. Prick the sausages with a two-pronged fork in several places. Place them in a skillet with about one-fourth inch of water and bring to boil on top of the stove. Put the skille in the oven and bake about 25 to 30 minutes or until browned and cooked through. Check the sausages after about 10 minutes. If liquid has accumulated, pour it off. Continue baking.

3. Meanwhle melt two tablespoons of butter in a small casserole and add the onion. Stir until onion is translucent and add the garlic and by leaf. Cook about threee minutes, stirring. Add the broth and bring to the boil on top of the stove. Cover and place in the oven along with the sausages. Bake exactly 25 minutes — no longer. Uncover and stir with a fork to make the rice fluffy.

4. When the sausages are done, remove them. Pour off the fat from the skillet.

5. When ready to serve, add half a cup of tomato sauce to the rice and stir to blend. Spoon equal portions of the rice in the center of four plates. Place one serving of sausage in the middle of the rice and serve the tomato sauce on the side.

Yield: Four to six servings.

SAUCE TOMATE
(Tomato sauce)

- 2 or 3 tomatoes, about one and one-fourth pounds, or use 3 cups of canned tomatoes
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 1½ cups finely minced onion
- 1 clove garlic, finely minced
- Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

1. Remove the core from the tomatoes. Cut the tomatoes into one-inch cubes. There should be about three to four cups.

2. Heat half the butter in a saucepan and add the onion and garlic. Cook, stirring about one minute, and add the tomatoes, salt and pepper to taste.

3. Cook about five minutes. Pour the mixture into the container of a food processor or use and electric blender.

4. Blend to a fine sauce. Spoon into a saucepan. Add the remaining butter and serve.

Yield: About two cups.

How to Make Best of Eating Alone

eating right

By Ruth Fremes and Zak Sabry

We continue to draw on the experiences of readers who live and eat alone and wrote us about them.

Dear Ruth and Zak: I am 39, male, divorced and living alone on a very modest income. One problem where I live is that most of us live in one room and share fridge, stove, cupboard and eating facilities. This doesn't give me space for storage, especially when there are three to a fridge that usually a small and old model. It is, therefore, tempting to cop out of cooking as many of us hate to eat alone. As a local resident once said, "To eat alone is to feed; with company is to dine".

I have always loved cooking, so I would like to pass on some of the things I do when inclined.

I like shopping at the wonderful little shops which allow the purchase of small quantities. I enjoy buying one pork chop, three onions, five potatoes and tomatoes.

When moved to spend a few hours in the kitchen, I'll make maybe a gallon of borscht or pea soup and keep it in a large pickle jar.

I use a lot of onion, and find it both easy and economical to buy the frozen ready-chopped bag. It takes little space in the freezer.

I enjoy delicatessen items, such as potato salad. I find buying such items both convenient and reasonable in cost.

There is much variety to be gained in using the tinned luncheon meat and corned beef. I enjoy a corned beef patty, mixed with my frozen chopped onion and fried with a poached egg on top.

Some of the problems I face include: the large size packages that frozen vegetables come in, when you are sharing a small freezer (ours will hold three 2-lb. bags, one for each of us). Also, in our house, it is impossible to get together to shop and share. So shopping is always done on an individual basis. Herbs and seasonings come in large bottles, too large for us singles. To have a decent selection, you would end up with a 40-year supply. E.E.W. — Toronto

Dear E.E.W.: You certainly appear to be resourceful in handling your eating-alone problems. We sympathize with the lack of enough foods being retailed in supermarkets in small packages. There is a place for the small grocery store that would allow you to buy what you want, in the amount you want.

In a situation such as your own, it would be nice to have neighbors who feel about cooking and eating the way you do. Then it would be feasible to shop-and-share and to cook-and-dine together.

Dear Ruth and Zak: My life is very busy. I make all my own meals. I live alone and have a very limited budget. For these reasons, I have evolved to eating the following every day:

For breakfast, I have one small glass of orange juice, one egg beaten up in a large glass of milk, and a serving of bran cereal with milk.

For lunch, I have a quarter of cucumber, approximately 2 ounces of cheese, one large or two small apples, and sometimes two or three slices of white bread.

For dinner, I have a serving of turkey (approximately ¾ cup), about ½ cup of peas, and about ½ cup of raw carrots.

My question is: am I getting everything I need in this diet? I realize that any lack of any of the nutrients would be emphasized by the complete absence of variety. I am unwilling to have to spend any extra time preparing meals which might be necessary for a more varied diet. P.B. — Don Mills, Ont.

Dear P.B.: You are fairly well on such a rigidly constructed diet, although we cannot endorse the lack of variety in it.

We calculated that your diet, as you stated it, provides you with about 1,200 calories and the daily needs of iron, calcium, vitamins A and C. There are many vitamins, such as B6, folate (a B vitamin), and minerals, such as zinc and other trace minerals for which there are no sufficient food analysis to allow us to calculate their level in your diet. It is difficult, therefore, to say for certain that a diet so lacking in variety could be nutritionally balanced. This is why nutritionists often emphasize the need for a wide variety of vegetables and fruits, where many trace minerals are found.

You are dependent on apples and oranges (really, orange juice) for fruits and on cucumbers, peas and carrots for vegetables. You should be able to widen the variety without spending extra time in meal preparation. Bananas, apricots, plums, peaches, grapes, pears and strawberries are just as easy to eat as apples and oranges. Similarly, you can treat yourself to asparagus, cauliflower, broccoli, celery sticks, lettuce, potatoes and tomatoes with the same ease that you serve cucumbers, peas and carrots.

Your caloric level is a bit on the low side for someone who is busy and presumably physically active. You can increase the calories in your diet a bit as long as you don't exceed your desirable weight. Here you can improve your diet by increasing your consumption of bread. Make it whole wheat or a multi-grain bread and ensure an increase of your intake of many vitamins and minerals and fibre, along with additional calories.

Dear Ruth and Zak: I live alone and seem to be battling the bulge hopelessly. I somehow am gaining five pounds per year since 28, uncontrollably.

I used to lose but now get so nervous that only something like a sandwich settles me down. I had a nervous breakdown at 26 and my body shape seems to be gradually falling apart. Do you have any advice for me? — Name and address withheld.

Dear Reader: Obviously, the problem of weight gain is tied up with a psychiatric condition that might have its origin in whatever caused the nervous breakdown. Make sure that you are receiving the necessary help. This might be the hardest part in dealing with the problem.

In addition, you should develop eating and exercise habits that would restore your body to a healthy and fit condition. Your physician should refer you for nutrition and dietetic counselling. Then try to join a suitable exercise program at your local Y or one that is sponsored by the recreation department in your community. Exercise and good eating habits can help make you feel good about yourself — treat yourself well - you deserve it.

GARDENING

Signs of New Year Evident in November

On a November day it is possible to see that, indeed, a new gardening year has begun.

It may be that a stiff wind has suddenly all but cleared the deciduous shrubs and trees of their leaves, at the same time bringing down dried needles from conifers and the last seedpods and catkins from other trees.

But before we can get the feeling of despondency at the closing of one segment of garden life we become engrossed in the moving of a plant or two for a more satisfying grouping in future.

As we lift a couple of small Laurustinus, we are delighted with the vigorous new roots. These plants will do well in the sunny location allotted to them. They will form a dense shelter summer and winter to other plants needing the bit of shade on their north side in summer and to others wanting to bask in the low sun to their south in winter.

Healthy plants, both trees and shrubs, delivered by your local nursery or your own pickup, show this same evidence of next year's growth, in various ways according to the type of plant.

Even leafless trees will have healthy roots, lively bark, and the signs of growth buds for next season already to be seen on branches and twigs.

One of the commonest of spiraeas, S. thunbergii, whose small white flowers are often like a drift of snow on bare twigs early in the new year, already shows the tiny green-calyxed flower buds.

In the greenhouse or unheated porch or sunroom the problem is no longer how to provide humidity without saturation of soil in pots, nor to keep temperatures from soaring beyond the safety mark. Now we try to find ways to store the day's warmth to last for a few more hours of darkness, and to prevent condensation on pots and glass.

No longer will the sun heat take care of surplus moisture. Watering must be done on an individual basis — each plant getting what it needs and can use before darkness descends, thus reducing the surplus to condense on the glass and pots as they cool.

While a few potted plants will be resting, others like freesias, some of the succulents such as the Jade-plant, (Crassula argentea) are either already beginning to bloom or preparing to do so, and the gorgeous hybrid Hippeastrums (too often confused with Amaryllis) will soon be thrusting up their sturdy stems.

All these are signs of new beginnings in the plant world to be found on a day in November.

If all else should fail, look around for a garden spot where a bulb or two of narcissus is known to be hidden. Carefully lift it with a spade just for the reassurance of seeing the strong white roots making their way into surrounding soil in search of food. Then put it back into the soil, undisturbed by your inspection. While we know the flower and the leaves are already formed within a mature bulb, the plant needs early root growth to furnish energy for expansion and growth in earliest spring.

Seeing this root action in November should be consolation to the most pessimistic that it is not only winter that is coming, but spring, again in all its glory.

Porn Won't be Classified

Attorney General Garde Gardom has turned down a Greater Victoria School District request to classify pornographic material.

But he has warned all magazine distributors in B.C. to deliver pornography only to store owners who won't display or sell it to children.

Board chairman Susan Brice said Gardom told her during a recent meeting the display and sale of pornographic magazines is already covered under new provincial guidelines.

Brice and trustee Peter Dorazio met with Gardom once in May and again in September to discuss the problem of pornographic magazines prominently displayed in corner grocery stores and sometimes sold to school children.

The board decided to ask for a classification system at the urging of district parents.

Gardom said in May the attorney-general's ministry was reviewing the problem and would submit a report in a few months. The report stated that existing provincial guidelines sufficiently deal with pornography problems.

Instead Gardom has written warning letters to all magazine distributors in the province, Brice said in a report to the board.

The warning letters say companies that display and sell pornography to children can now be prosecuted under the Criminal Code.

Brice said Gardom notified her of a recent decision by the Supreme Court of Ontario that sets a precedent for prosecution of pornographic material peddlers.

In a case against an Ontario magazine distributor of Penthouse and Oui magazines, the judge ruled the material was indecent and unfit for public display, Brices letter said.

The decision gives Gardom the authority to go after distributors in B.C.

Distributors in turn have warned local store owners they service to keep these magazines away from children.

According to Gardom there are now fewer pornographic magazines displayed in Victoria stores.

CATTLE CAR BLOWN 70 Km.

PINCHER CREEK, Alta. (CP) — CP Rail oficials said a Pincher Station derailing device, which would have halted a runaway cattle car that last week travelled 70 kilometres before coming to rest on an incline, had been removed prior to the incident.

The car, carrying 50 head of cattle and blown by 80-kilometre-an-hour winds, made its way from Pincher Station through Fort Macleod to a point near Monarch, about 70 kilometres northeast of this southwestern Alberta community.

CNR Held at Fault

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada refused Tuesday to change a jury finding that Canadian National Railways was mainly responsible for an accident which cost a child both her legs.

The high court ruled 7-to-2 against a CNR appeal to overturn the jury's ruling that the railway was at fault when one of its trains ran over France Vincent in Montreal 10½ years ago. Vincent, 11 at the time, was riding her bicycle the wrong way on a one-way street when the collision occurred at a rail crossing.

The jury found CNR 95 per cent responsible for the accident. Damages were set at $100,000 but the trial judge reduced the railway's liability to 55 per cent.

CNR argued unsuccessfully before the Quebec Court of Appeal to have the jury verdict reversed, then took the case before the Supreme Court.

Mr. Justice Yves Pratte, writing for the majority, said the jury verdict was severe but not unreasonable.

However, Mr. Justice Ronald Martland, writing the dissent, calling the verdict unreasonable and unjust. He said the freight train was travelling slowly, with its bell sounding and the crossing signals in operation. The child, travelling the wrong way on the street had appeared from behind a parked truck and struck the locomotive in its left front corner.

Mr. Justice Martland said the case was similar to that of a motorist who approaches a green light. He was obligated to watch out for an unexpected emergency but was not required to stop to see if someone was going to run a red light.

His views were supported by Mr. Justice Wishart Spence.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

McGavin's bakes your daily bread.

To name a couple.

But from now on, you'll find our bread in these new, distinctive wrappers.

The ones with the McGavin's name. Although we've changed the package, you'll enjoy the same great quality.

Because McGavin's bread is still delivered to your store the same day we bake it.

McGavin's good bread.

Mystery Man Teng a Hit

By WILLIAM CHAPMAN
Washington Post

TOKYO — China's Teng Hsiao-ping came to Japan a mystery man last week and left with a quickly-won reputation as a masterful diplomat, a font of folksy wisdom and disarming wit, and a model of sagacity, candor and tact.

Remarkably and ironically, Teng appeared to offend no one except Japan's Communists and Socialists. He ignored the former during his eight-day visit and outraged the latter by saying that China's present rulers have no objection to Japan's military alliance with the United States.

Teng's embrace of all others in Japan tended to obscure the fact that, on the surface at least, nothing was accomplished or changed by his visit.

It ended Sunday.

Teng was as tough as ever on the question of U.S. relations with Taiwan. He virtually begged for Japan's assistance in modernizing China, but said nothing about how China intends to pay for all of those plants and machines it wants to buy here.

It was simply a goodwill visit, intended to tap that latent Japanese affection for China that existed for many centuries, and it accomplished just that.

The Japanese, who do not like surprises, were apprehensive of his visit. A survivor of 40 years of war, revolution, intrigue and purges, the deputy prime minister was reputed to be an earthy, blunt, enigmatic man who spits a lot into spittoons.

"Let bygones be bygones," he told Emperor Hirohito.

Would he lay claim to the Senkaku Islands, which Japan also claims? Let the next generation worry about the Senkakus, said Teng.

The performance pleased almost everyone, from Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda on down.

"He is genuinely interested in Japan," said a Nissan Motor Co. executive after showing Teng the factory. "He was asked things like, 'What kind of education do these men on the assembly line have?'"

Teng praised Japan's automobiles, bullet trains, autumn foliage and Mount Fuji, and the man in the street was struck by his youthful vigor.

"Cute! cute!" someone in a crowd murmured as Teng, a man of small stature, left a building in downtown Tokyo.

"He has aroused the pro-Chinese sentiment in the Japanese," summed up Keio University president Tadao Ishikawa, a China scholar.

What struck many was Teng's determination to meet and chat with those unofficial Japanese who were friends of China before the present government grudgingly moved to sign the peace treaty he came to celebrate. He insisted on seeing the disgraced former prime minister, Kakuei Tanaka, and he paid a special call on aging business leaders who had tried to establish relations with China as long ago as the 1950s.

"When you are drinking water," Teng explained, quoting the late prime minister Chou En-lai, "don't forget the people who dug the well."

Playing diplomat is a new role for the 74-year-old twice-purged Chinese leader. In Peking he is known as the pragmatic architect of the new modernization, which is designed to make China an economic power by the end of this century, and as the chief purger of former enemies, the "Gang of Four." But this year he also has become China's emissary to the rest of Asia. He has already visited Burmak Nepal and North Korea, and soon takes his show to Malaysia, Singapore and Thailand.

His travels are an essential part of the thaw in China, an effort to show that the Chinese are truly coming out of their shell after the purges and rebellions. Chairman Hua Kuo-feng went to Eastern Europe, Chinese trade missions are heading for Europe and numbers of students may go to Japan and other countries. There is even a Chinese team in Tokyo studying baseball. It is China's proof to the world that the old days of spurning foreign ways are gone.

An unusual feature on this trip was the presence of Teng's wife, Cho Lin, who performed the duties that might be expected of the wife of a traveling leader of any country. She visited a school, dispensed some pretty Chinese scrolls, and, like her husband, tromped though a steel mill wearing a revolutionary-red hard hat.

Since the Cultural Revolution began in 1966, no Chinese leader had traveled abroad with his wife until recently. One reason was the unfortunate experience of Wang Kuang-mei, who had gone with her husband, then-president Liu Shao-chi to Indonesia in 1966. She was pilloried by Cultural Revolution wall posters for having worn a silk dress on that trip, and the Red Guards accused her of having used the dress to flirt with Indonesia's President Sukarno.

Cho may have had that experience in mind on this trip. She wore trousers and jacket, possibly to satisfy the proletarian tastes back home, but they seemed to observers to be tastefully designed and elegantly embroidered to meet the social requirements for an ambassador's wife.

GUARD ABOLISHED

TOKYO (UPI) — China has formaly abolished the Red Guard youth corps which Chairman Mao Tse-tung used to terrorize everyone from factory managers to government officials in the 1960s Cultural Revolution, Japanese newspapers said Tuesday.

The reports from Peking said the decision was announced in Monday's edition of the People's Daily, official newspaper of the Chinese Communist Party.

It means China's organization for young people 14 years old and up will revert to its pre-Cultural Revolution name of Communist Youth League, the paper said.

The new goals will be to improve young people's school performance, to strengthen their bodies through physical education and to make them "the successors in the Communist movement."

The Red Guard was set up in the 1960s as Mao's instrument to test his theory of continuing revolution. Mao contended that China's revolution should be continuous to keep entrenched bureaucrats and economic interests from dominating the government.

The Red Guards bullied factory managers, university heads and even high government officials. Its victims were haled before kangaroo courts, paraded through the streets and subjected to verbal abuse and sometimes beaten.

Reports from Peking in August, 1966, said Red Guards desecrated Christian churches and replaced altar pieces with busts of Mao. Others plastered walls with posters warning the populace to change their Western style clothing and hair styles.

Red Guards renamed streets and even demanded reversal of traffic lights to make red mean go and green mean stop.

Opportunity Knocks - Abroad

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian businessmen must go abroad to find trade opportunities and not rely on federal and provincial initiatives to provide trade overseas, Jack McKeown, assistant deputy minister of the provincial ministry of economic development, said.

McKeown was addressing a two-day seminar on trade opportunities with members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), arranged by the federal department of industry, trade and commerce.

OPEC includes Algeria, Ecuador, Gabon, Libya, Iran, Iraq, Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, United Arab Emirates, Quatar, Venezuela, Indonesia and Nigeria.

"Saudi Arabia is spending money by the truckload," said D. S. McCracken of the Canadian embassy in Saudi Arabia. "They have a $145 billion budget for spending on oil and gas processing equipment, new ports, a new highway network and infrastructure.

"There's a strong market ahead, and plenty of opportunities for Canadian business. But there's tough competition."

The competition comes from West Germany, Britain, Japan, France, Holland, the United States and other industrialized countries, he said.

"The business is done by sharpening pencils and playing the game according to the way the Saudis play it," McCracken said. "It's the only game in town."

He said Saudia Arabia is also in the market for many products from frozen vegetables, iron and steel to car accessories.

In 1977, Canada exported $108,745,000 worth of goods and services to Saudi Arabia, while its imports from Saudi Arabia totaled $712,281,000.

Canada's balance of trade with the 13 OPEC countries in 1977 also was in deficit. Exports were valued at $1.2 billion and imports at $2.9 billion. A substantial proportion of the import total was in oil.

However, Canada's trade with OPEC nations has climbed steadily from $290.1 million in 1973 to $1.2 billion in 1977.

OPEC countries offer opportunities for Canada in the fields of forestry products and machinery, telecommunications, power generation and transmission, housing and construction, the seminar was told.

"Libya is also embarked on acquiring new civil aircraft, setting up airlines with the associated telecommunications equipment, and in harbor construction," said C. R. Mann, Canada's commercial secretary in Tripoli.

"Libya has money, and Canada has the goods. Marketing is not easy — telexes go unanswered in some cases. But those Canadian businessmen who have persevered and delivered the goods on time, whose word is trusted, have been very successful in Libya."

Opportunities for trade with other OPEC nations described by officials of the Canada Trade Commissioner Services included: prefabricated housing units in Algeria; consulting engineering, forest products processing equipment and electrical equipment in Nigeria; and oil and natural gas processing equipment in Kuwait — as well as data processing and telecommunications equipment.

Soviet SSTs on Ground Year After Inauguration

MOSCOW (Reuter) — A year after the Soviet Union inaugurated its age of supersonic transport, an airline official confirmed Tuesday that the fleet of Tupolev-144 aircraft remains grounded with no sign that services are to resume.

The TU—144, rival to the Anglo-French Concorde, entered passenger service in a blaze of publicity last Nov. 1, but weekly flights were withdrawn quietly earlier this year, apparently after one of the planes crashed.

There has been no official explanation for the curtailment of flights, but Western diplomatic sources, who disclosed reports of the crash last month, said Soviet aviation officials since have confirmed privately that one of the droop-nosed aircraft came down early this summer during a test flight.

The officials reported two crew members were killed and three seriously injured in the crash 60 kilometres east of Moscow, the sources said.

No passengers were on board, they added.

An enquiry official for the state airline Aeroflot, which was flying the planes from Moscow to Alma-Ata in central Asia, said today the aircraft still are not operating and no date has been set for its return to service.

The Western sources said the last known passenger flight on the 3,240-kilometre route was in June.

The 2,300-kilometre-an-hour Tupolev, hailed as a technological achievement by the official news media at its inauguration last year, has not been mentioned publicly here for several months.

The sources said Soviet officials are talking about solving the Tupolev's problems in a matter of months.

PRESSMEN REACH TERMS

NEW YORK (AP) — A tentative settlement of the 85-day pressmen's strike against The Times and The Daily News was announced today following a 21-hour negotiating session.

However, before the two big morning dailies can resume publication, settlement must be reached with three other newspaper unions which are on strike against both papers and the pressmen must ratify the tentative agreement.

Spokesmen for The Times and The News said they intended to publish by Sunday at the latest.

The agreement guarantees the jobs of all 1,508 regular pressmen at the three major Manhattan-based dailies for six years. In return, the pressmen would agree to reduced manpower levels in the pressrooms, with those levels to be reached as pressmen retire, quit or are fired.

Canal Claims Top $2B

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — Personal injury and property damage claims resulting from the chemical contamination of the Love Canal neighborhood topped $2 billion Tuesday when class-action lawsuits were served on Niagara Falls, its board of education and Niagara County.

In the largest claim, the Love Canal Homeowners Association filed notice it was seeking $1 billion on behalf of all residents who have suffered illnesses or injuries due to the toxic chemicals leaching from the landfill.

A $200-million class-action claim for injuries was filed on behalf of all members of the Concerned Love Canal Renters Association, which represents residents of the LaSalle Development Housing Project.

Class-action claims were also filed for property damage. They said that chemical contamination has caused a loss in the fair market value of canal area houses.

While most lawyers considered Tuesday to be the last day under the 90-day deadline for filing claims against municipalities, several lawyers said they plan to file more in the next few days.

The Love Canal, a 19th-century ditch that was never completed, was used from 1943-1953 as a chemical dump by the Hooker Chemicals and Plastics Corp.

The company filled the ditch, then deeded it to the board of education, which built a junior high school on part of the site. Single-family dwellings were constructed on the rest of the three-block strip.

Two years ago, chemicals began percolating to the surface. On Aug. 2 the state declared an emergency.

Lebanon Forces Beefed Up

BEIRUT (UPI) — Saudi Arabia and Sudan will increase the number of troops they contribute to the 30,000-man Arab peacekeeping force in Lebanon, Beirut press reports said today.

The French-language L'Orient-Le Jour said an additional 600 Saudis will arrive and 250 more Sudanese to supplement the estimated 1,200 Saudis and 1,000 Sudanese already stationed in Lebanon.

The newspaper said the new Saudi arrivals will take up positions evacuated by Saudi troops redeployed from West Beirut last month.

Twins Separated, Doctors Cautious

SEATTLE (AP) — Surgeons were pleased but cautious after a six-hour operation to separate day-old Siamese twin girls, joined at the abdomen and sharing a liver and sternum.

"The next four or five days will be critical," said Dr. John Stevenson, the primary surgeon, after surgery Tuesday night.

"Both babies will have to adjust to living separate lives," he said. "They have a large raw surface of liver that has been cut in two. That's a large area that has to heal, and we have to watch for infection or possible problems with the lungs.

"If they get over the operation, they should live a normal, active, physical life," he said, adding that the girls might need other operations in the next few days if complications arise.

The girls, referred to by Children's Orthopedic Hospital staff as Baby Girl A and Baby Girl B, were listed in critical condition after surgery.

Dr. Stevenson said the shared liver was cut in half during the operation and the sternum, or breastbone, was also divided. Preliminary tests indicated the babies also shared a bowel, but doctors found the bowels were separate.

The twins were delivered by caesarean section Monday at University Hospital, with a combined weight of 13 pounds, 14 ounces. Their mother, an Anchorage, Alaska, woman in her 30s, was reported in good condition.

The parents have asked that their names not be released. The couple have two other children.

Crash Survivors In Good Shape

MOSCOW (UPI) — An American embassy medical team met the 10 American survivors of last week's crash of a U.S. Navy reconnaissance plane in the Soviet Far East city of Khabarovsk today and reported they were in good condition and arrangements were under way to evacuate them as soon as possible.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman said embassy medical officer Dr. Carl Nydell Jr. and medical technician Jack Briggs examined the 10 Navy aviators and reported all of them were in "basically good condition" and ambulatory.

The 10 were members of a 15-man crew of a U.S. Navy P3 Orion reconnaissance plane which crashed at sea in the chilly waters of the north Pacific 300 miles off the coast of Soviet Siberia last Thursday.

The Law - Without Legal Jargon

NEW YORK (AP) — The first plain-language law in the United States goes into effect today in New York state, banishing legal terms from most consumer transactions and requiring that they be replaced with understandable English.

The law requires all consumer contracts for less than $50,000, including leases, loans and credit-card agreements, to be written in "a clear and coherent manner, using words with common and everyday meanings."

An individual consumer could file suit alleging violation of the law, with $50 being the maximum fine on conviction. The maximum fine in a class-action suit is $10,000.

New York City's largest bank, Citibank, and its largest rental agent, Helmsley-Spear, have changed their contract forms to comply with the law. After a period of initial resistance, many smaller businesses seem to be falling in line as well.

A number of lawyers continue to question the wisdom of throwing out centuries of legal terminology.

But Assemblyman Peter Sullivan, a Westchester County Republican who sponsored the law, said "people have found they can do it if they try.

"Some lawyers are bitter because they're going to have to relearn the use of language," said Sullivan, a stockbroker and non-lawyer. "It's like the 14th century, when Edward III took the court system off Latin and made English the official language. Now we're going to make English the official language again, instead of the gobbledygook we've been hearing for years."

New Arthritis Drug Cuts Side Effects

NEW YORK (UPI) — Fewer side effects and fewer pills a day are the marks of a new anti-arthritis prescription drug going into distribution in the United States today, scientists reported Tuesday.

The drug is not a cure for arthritis but it reduces inflammation which causes much of the disability and pain in major forms of the illness striking 30 million Americans.

Sulindac, the new drug just approved by the Food and Drug Administration for use in the United States, goes by the trade name "Clinoril."

Arthritics who take aspirin may take as many as 16 a day and many users develop gastro-intestinal troubles or are troubled with ringing in the ears. The new drug appears to avoid these side effects in most persons who take it.

"Clinoril" was discovered and developed over a 12-year period by researchers at Merck Sharp Dohme Research Laboratories in West Point, Pa.

"The drug appears to work in an interesting way in the body and has longer-lasting action than aspirin. We hope it will be a major advance that will bring real benefit to a much broader range of patients," said Dr. Lewis H. Sarett, Merck's senior vice-president for science and technology, who synthesized cortisone 30 years ago.

As with all drugs, Clinoril is not free of side effects for all patients.

"In the clinical studies, it was found that Clinoril caused headache, dizziness or nervousness in some patients," the Merck scientists reported.

Rash and itching were noted in some patients and a hypersensitivity reaction occurred occasionally. The most frequent side effect was gastrointestinal pain, which occurred in 10.2 percent of patients, compared with 19.4 percent for aspirin, the scientists said.

"Advances against arthritis do not come in miracles, as everyone hoped with cortisone, but come step by step," Sarett said..

The track record reported for the new drug in clinical trials showed that in osteoarthritis, affecting 16 million, help came with one or two tablets, comparable in effectiveness to eight to 16 aspirin a day, with much lower adverse effects and milder gastrointestinal reactions and reduced ringing in the ears.

In rheumatoid arthritis, hitting 5 million of which 3.5 million are disabled, two tablets of Clinoril a day showed pain relief and lessened disabling joint symptoms comparable to that achieved by 12 to 16 aspirin a day. Again, it was with fewer side effects.

Plan Rapped

WASHINGTON (AP)— The Carter administration is hoping it can rally labor support for voluntary wage-and-price guidelines despite opposition from the AFL-CIO's George Meany, who has called for mandatory inflation controls instead.

The administration's chief inflation-fighter also says it may take at least a year for the program to lower the inflation rate, now more than eight per cent a year.

Meany, the 84-year-old president of the 14-million-member AFL-CIO, unloaded his wrath at the Carter guideline program Tuesday, saying it would require a greater sacrifice on the part of workers than businessmen. He urged Carter to call a special session of Congress to enact wage-and-price controls.

"The plan his advisers have devised, is unfair and inequitable and the end result of their ill-considered proposals could well be another recession," Meany said in a statement adopted by the federation's executive council, which includes 33 union presidents.

"We now believe the time has come for mandatory, legislated economic controls," he told reporters. It was his first public comment on the voluntary guidelines program Carter announced last week.

Administration officials quickly dismissed Meany's call for a special session of Congress to enact controls and said they have have good indications of support from other labor leaders and from union members.

FEW NATIVE SPEAKERS

SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain (AP) — Only 22.7 per cent of Spain's Basque populations speak the local language, says the Academy of the Basque Language. The survey said there are 632,301 Basque-speaking people in the three-province northern region and neighboring Navarre province, which have a combined population of 2.78 million. There is an active Basque separatist movement in the region led by nationalists who seek independence for the area.

They're 'Dung-Ho' On Beetle

WASHINGTON (AP) — South American dung beetles may be the answer to fly control in cattle feedlots — taking over manure piles so that the pesky flies have no place to breed, the U.S. agriculture department said today.

A $15,000 U.S. government grant will be used by a scientist in Florida to see if dung-breeding beetles from South America can do the job.

In its announcement, the agriculture department said dung beetles native to the United States "are not up to the task of significantly reducing the flies" that breed in manure.

TOO MUCH AIR BAD FOR YOU

CHICAGO (UPI) — Too much fresh air can be just about as bad as too little — causing an assortment of problems that include insomnia and nightmares, says a report in the recent Journal of the American Medical Association.

Overbreathing is a common, often disabling and frequently inadequately treated health problem, Drs. Jose C. Missri and Sidney Alexander of Boston wrote in the edition released Tuesday.

The doctors said overbreathing can be lead to fatigue, weakness, exhaustion, heart irregularities, dizziness, lightheadedness, numbness in hands and feet, shortness of breath, chest pain, dry mouth, yawning, stomach discomforts, muscle pains and cramps, stiffness, tension, anxiety, insomnia and nightmares.

Sometimes there is a physical reason for overbreathing, but most often there is no organic cause, the doctors said. Acute or chronic anxiety is probably the cause in a majority of hyperventilators, they said.

Hyperventilationis an unconscious action and can be difficult to stop, the physicians said.

More North Sea Gas

LONDON (CP) — The Labor government of Prime Minister James Callaghan pledged today to fight inflation and unemployment.

In the speech from the throne read by the Queen at the opening of Parliament, the government said it plans to increase the output of gas and oil from the North Sea and use it to stimulte the economy.

The drive to cut Britain's workless, numbering 1.3 million or 5.9 per cent of the labor force, includes a scheme to subsidize short-time working. Employees would be compensated up to 75 per cent of their full wages for each day they are laid off, with the government providing the money. This should permit firms to engage more workers.

Callaghan must call an election by October, 1979, although he has the option of calling one at any time he thinks suitable.

The government also announced plans to set up special new assemblies in Scotland and Wales early next year and in Northern Ireland later. These assemblies, with limited powers of home rule, are aimed at thwarting nationalist movements in those regions.

Standings in the 635-member House of Commons are: Labor 308, plus four independent members who always side with Labot for a total of 312; Conservatives 282, Liberals 13, Scottish Nationalists 11, Ulster Unionists 10, Welsh Nationalists 3.

China Wall Longer

PEKING (Reuter) — Archaeologists have found more of the Great Wall of China, the New China News agency said today.

The latest section to be discovered extended intermittently for more than 125 kilometres in the northeastern province of Kirin.

During the period of warring from 475 to 221 B.C., various states built their own defensive walls across northern China. They were linked up to form the Great Wall of China — the only man-made object visible from the moon — after the country was unified under the Chin dynasty from 221 to 207 B.C.

The latest addition to the Great Wall was built about 2,000 years ago. It was found during archaeological surveys between 1975 and 1977.

The news agency said the addition measured two to three metres high to six metres wide at the base. The remains of a number of ancient towns, fortresses, towers for signal fires, settlements and tombs were also found.

Belt-Up Eyed

HALIFAX (CP) — Highways Minister Tom McInnis says he favors proclaiming Nova Scotia's seat belt legislation to help curb a rising number of highway deaths.

Workers Reject 16.5%

LONDON (Reuter) — Unions representing 57,000 striking British Ford Motor Company workers said Tuesday they would recommend rejection of the company's latest offer of a 16.5-per-cent wage increase.

The offer, more than three times higher than the government's controversial limits on pay raises, was made in late-night talks between management and unions.

The five-week-old stoppage has crippled British plants and slowed down Ford's production lines in Western Europe, some of which rely on supplies of British-made parts.

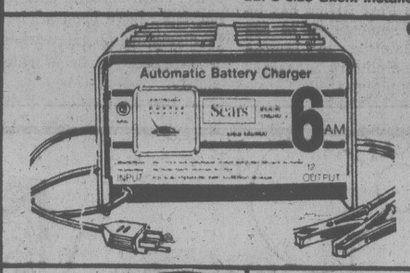

The new offer included an increase of 9.75 per cent on basic pay and extra bonuses up to 6.75 per cent for employees who "work normally"—turn up on time and only take days off when genuinely ill.

NO FURTHER ACTION PLANNED ON GUARD

The B.C. corrections service plans no action against a Wilkinson Road jail guard convicted in January of assaulting a prisoner.

David Schultz, Wilkinson Road director, said as far as he is concerned, Robert James Saxon, 40, is an excellent guard who will remain on staff.

Saxon appealed his conviction in provincial court, where he was fined $100 by Judge William Ostler.

Schultz said it would be doubling the penalty if discipline was to be ordered by the corrections service.

Saxon has spent about $1,100 and guards and prison staff have contributed another $1,300 toward the legal costs to date.

Post Office Closed By Staff Vandalism

SHERBROOKE (CP) — Post Office authorities say employees at the main post office here performed acts of vandalism early Tuesday, forcing a suspension of service.

A spokesman said that postal workers complained they couldn't work when the city's water supply was shut off for about an hour during the early morning.

About 6 a.m, an hour after the water had been restored, supervisors discovered that several inches of water had cascaded into the basement, the spokesman said.

Carpets were soaked, and certain parts of the sorting operation had to be shut down for fear of electrical shocks, he said. However, mail was stored on pallets and was undamaged.

Authorities are investigating, but the official said there is little hope of finding the culprits.

Residents of this city 140 kilometres east of Montreal are complaining that very little mail is being delivered.

Meanwhile, in Montreal, two Quebec officials of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) charged Tuesday the Post Office is using government back-to-work legislation to "harass" inside postal workers.

Clement Morel and Marcel Perreault told a news conference the Post Office has instructed supervisors to use the legislation to impose strict disciplinary measures on the employees.

Releasing what they said is an internal document prepared by the Post Office, Morel and Perreault said supervisors have been advised to discipline postal workers who appear to be working slowly.

Trade Talks Set

HALIFAX (CP) — The need for increased trade between New England and Eastern Canada will be on the agenda next week when the five premiers and six governors meet in Quebec City.

Stranded Film Crew Rescued

STEWART (CP) — A film crew and a helicopter pilot have been airlifted off Frank Mackie Glacier, about 64 kilometres from this northwestern British Columbia community, after they were stranded there because of poor weather.

The five had been fighting freezing temperatures at the 2,100-metre level of the glacier since Sunday afternoon. The four film technicians were working on a movie about a film crew that runs into trouble on an Arctic island.

A search and rescue spokesman in Victoria said a helicopter picked up the five men Tuesday after their exact location had been determined through a signal from their stranded helicopter's emergency locator transmitter.

The men were reported in satisfactory condition but were taken to hospital here for observation.

The crew members, whose names have not been released, were doing preliminary work on a $7 million movie, Bear Island, based on the novel by Alastair Maclean.

Inuits Deeded Ownership Of Mackenzie, Beaufort

SACHS HARBOUR, N.W.T. (CP) — The federal government and the Inuit of the Western Arctic Tuesday signed an agreement calling for Inuit ownership of 95,830 kilometres of land plus a $45 million settlement.

The area involved includes the Mackenzie River Delta and the Beaufort Sea, where oil and gas exploration have been intense.

An Indian affairs department news release said the Inuit have selected 12,950 square kilometres of land surrounding communities of Sachs Harbour, Tuktoyaktuk, Holman Island, Paulatuk, Inuvik and Aklavik.

The Inuit will have both surface and subsurface rights to the land and in some cases be provided with exclusive hunting, fishing and trapping rights throughout the western Arctic.

The agreement in principle signed by Indian Affairs Minister Hugh Faulkner and Sam Raddi, president of the Committee for Original People's Entitlement (COPE), will provide the framework for the final agreement expected next fall.

COPE is an Inuvik-based group which serves about 2,500 Inuit in seven Western Arctic communities. The organization pursued a regional settlement independent of a land claim by the Inuit Tapirisat, the national Eskimo brotherhood, for all Arctic lands traditionally occupied by the Inuit.

COPE submitted its claim in May, 1977 and in July, 1978 the group and the federal government reached a tentative agreement which was subsequently ratified by the western Inuit.

The federal government, in addition to the cash settlement, will provide assistance to the Inuit for development of new businesses and allow the Inuit to negotiate participation agreements with potential developers to ensure training and employment benefits from ans subsurface development.

Noel Starblanket, president of the National Indian Brotherhood, recently criticized the agreement in which the Inuit gave up their aboriginal claim to 268,000 square kilometres along the Arctic Coast and in the Arctic Islands.

Starblanket said $45 million sounds like a lot of money but when looked at closely it worked out to less money per acre than what U.S. tribes received more than 100 years ago.

He added that even the James Bay land claims agreement, made final last year, was a better deal in terms of dollars and cents.

The brotherhood, which represents 300,000 registered Indians, fears that Ottawa plans to use the COPE and James Bay agreements as models for settling other land claims.

There are three land claims in the territories—Tapirisat's, the Dene claim to the Mackenzie Valley and the Metis and non-status Indian claim to the valley.

Last month, Faulkner suspended federal government financing of Mackenzie land claims because the Dene, mainly status Indians, and the Metis and non-status Indians have been unable to agree on a single claim for the 720,000 square kilometre area.

You know it's no wonder Vic and Toni do so much business in Admiral appliances and color televisions. They buy in such large quantities and sell such a big volume at prices it's almost impossible to compete with. Vic says we must have large volume and fast turnover in order to continue to offer such low prices. But we also know price is not everything — Quality is also very important. Admiral quality is always right up there in pretty well all the ratings, so you get the best of both worlds. Quality Admiral products at a price, combined with The Traders excellent service, trade-in policy, free local delivery this week and easy terms too. You just can't lose.

"I hope Vic and Toni's condominium in Hawaii has an Admiral with an automatic ice maker, chilled water dispenser and wine chilling racks like ours do here." I'm off Thursday. — Trader Bill in the Appliance Corner

The Last Original Scout Dies

ROOSEVELT, Utah — Arthur Sadler, the last of the original boy scouts, has died at the age of 86.

Sadler moved to the United States in 1915 and continued in the scout movement.

He was scoutmaster of a troop in Chicago, and after moving to Utah after the Second World War became a lecturer and instructor.

Dad Still Thinks Son Snatched By Space Beings

MELBOURNE — The father of an Australian pilot who disappeared after reporting a UFO was shadowing him said today he still believes his son was "snatched by beings from outer space".

"Nothing else explains it," Guido Valentich said. "That explanation is as good as any.

"Fred was a firm believer in UFOs and I now think he was right. What else can explain this mystery."

Frederick Valentich, 20, and his rented single-engine Cessna disappeared on a night flight off the southern Australia coast 12 days ago.

He radioed air traffic control in Melbourne that a long shiny craft with four green lights was "playing games" with him.

Seconds later there was a strange metallic sound from his radio and he and his plane vanished.

Back Next Year: Houdini

DETROIT — Devotees of Harry Houdini say the long departed escape artist promised during a Halloween seance in the hospital where he died that he will be back next year — with even more amazing feats.

Four researchers into the occult began their seance in Room 401 of Detroit's Grace Hospital at 1:26 p.m. Tuesday — 52 years to the minute after the magician died of a ruptured appendix in 1926.

Seated around an old wooden desk in the semi-darkness of the hospital room as others have done on previous Halloweens, the four beckoned him, and Houdini appeared, medium Irene Rucinsky said.

Houdini said he had not communicated with anyone on earth since his death, and that he would not again before "taking over another body" next year.

"I would like to be born on the anniversary of my death (next year)," Ms. Rucinsky quoted Houdini as saying.

"The after-life is peaceful, quiet, and there are no differences between one another," but Houdini's life "terminated too quickly."

"He had not fulfilled everything," Ms. Rucinsky said, so he wants to come back."

Sol Lewis, head of the Michigan Metaphysical Society, a 30-year veteran of parapsychology and a college teacher, led the group's questioning of Houdini.

He quoted Houdini as saying people in the after-life have the gift of prophecy, and said he predicted Middle East negotiations will break down, "relationships be totally severed and a direct confrontation will occur within a week."

RCA's Little Doggie On Comeback Trial

NEW YORK (AP) — Nipper, the little dog who cocked his ear beside an old-time gramophone bell to listen for "His Master's Voice," is making a comeback as an RCA trademark.

RCA decided 10 years ago to scrap Nipper and go modern with its corporate logo—just use its three initials in stark, modern design.

But, at a Tuesday news conference, Mort Gaffin, director of corporate identification, said not a week passes that his office does not get requests for information and pictures of Nipper. So Nipper—whose public never forgot him—is back.

Nipper and his wind-up gramophones, this time in a line drawing instead of a picture, will reappear on TV sets, on cartons, company buildings, delivery and service trucks, stationary, advertising and on record jackets.

The original Nipper lived in England in the 1890s. Artist Francis Barraud, brother of Nipper's owner, took the fox terrier home with him after his brother died. Barraud put on a recording and noted that Nipper sat attentively, as though listening for his master's voice.

Barraud painted a picture of it, which he sold along with its copyright, for £100 then the equivalent of about $450. RCA acquired the rights when it bought the Victor Talking Machine Co. in 1929.

Time for Flu Shots In Victoria Region

Several flu-like viruses are hitting the Capital Regional District, but regional health officer Dr. Allen Arneil says none of the potentially dangerous flu bugs has yet been isolated in the area.

Among the symptoms of the flu-like viruses — some of which are suspected of being adeno and echo viruses — are headaches, fevers, dizziness, neck pains, sore throat, swollen glands and chest symptoms, or combinations of any of them, Arneil reports.

He said people are "pretty miserable" when hit by a virus.

Arneil said about 9,000 flu shots have or will be given in the area to people who are under 65 but suffering from diseases that could be affected by the three dangerous strains of A-Texas, A-Russia and B-Hong Kong flu, and to people 65 years of age or more.

The doses are available through regional health clinics, doctors and hospitals.

The antibodies to the A-Victoria, which surfaced in Australia about three years ago, Arneil says, are the same as those to the A-Texas strain.

He said flu shots are being ordered as needed in order not to overstock, but will be readily available if demands increase.

He says he doesn't expect any real flu cases to appear before mid-December, January and February.

The A-Texas variety swept through most of the southern United States last winter. Although not virulent, it felled a large number of elderly people through pneumonia that followed the flu symptoms.

The A-Russia virus, reported in areas as far apart as Czechoslovakia and China last winter, did not make a major appearance in North America.

The B-Hong Kong strain is a relatively mild mutation of a flu virus which, three years ago, triggered emergency plans to innoculate the entire population because it was feared to be a killer flu. The fears proved groundless.

Trustee Candidate Meetings

Five all-candidates meetings will be held in the Greater Victoria School District before the Nov. 18 election.

The meetings are sponsored by the newly-formed Confederation of Victoria Parent Associations.

The first meeting is at Glanford Elementary at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 7 and is followed by meetings Nov. 9 at Monterey school, 7:30 p.m.; Nov. 14 at Vic West, 7:30; Nov. 15 at Lambrick Park, 8 p.m. and Nov. 16 at Sir James Douglas, 7:30 p.m.

Five positions are open on the board this year and incumbents Susan Brice, Peter Yorke, Bud Smith, Mark Fisher and Pete Dorazio are running for another term.

Martin Levin, a University of Victoria professor, Winfield Mott, a Capital Regional District administrator and Tom Arkell, a clerk are also candidates.

Levin, the last to declare his candidacy, teaches political science at UVic. This is his first try for public office.

Islanders Skeptical on Hydro Lines

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

Lasqueti Island residents are still skeptical of B.C. Hydro's announced intention not to use the island as a stepping stone for a transmission line between the mainland and Vancouver Island.

Hydro said last week it has accepted a consultant's recommendation to exclude the island from the transmission line corridor.

However, island resident Kevin Monahan said Monday that decision was not based on any humanitarian concern for the islanders but rather on new technical information.

Hydro has been told that it is feasible to splice the underwater section of the cable and therefore there is no need to drag the line across Lasqueti.

However, Monahan said that decision could just as easily change somewhere down the line and Lasqueti could once again be included in the corridor.

"We definitely feel good that we are not Number One but we are still Number Two," he said.

Lasqueti islanders have voiced strong objection to the line and the environmental and social effects the cable and a 660-foot wide right-of-way would have on their homes, gardens, farms, fields and forests.

Although the islanders feel some relief that the line is not scheduled to cross their properties, Monahan said, they will continue to fight the proposal on the basis that the line is not needed.

He said the Lasqueti Island steering committee will continue to press for a moratorium on such large projects until a comprehensive energy policy for the province has been proposed.

The latest consultant's report doesn't really change anything, he said. "The real issues are still at stake.

Beak Consultants Ltd. of Vancouver proposed in its report accepted by Hydro that the twin 550-kilovolt (kv) lines — running from Cheekeye substation, near Squamish, to Dunsmuir substation near Qualicum Beach on Vancouver Island — include two sections of submarine cable, joined by an overhead crossing on Texada Island.

The report, released last Thursday, dealt primarily with the Georgia Strait section of the $315-million line from Cape Cockburn on Nelson Island to Dunsmuir substation. A report published last year covered the mainland portion of the project from Cheekeye to Cape Cockburn.

Hydro hopes to complete the first 500-kv line by 1983 and the second by 1986.

Lasqueti Island residents are not the only ones concerned about the lines. Those on the Sechelt Peninsula are equally concerned.

Beak's latest report was vague about the route the line will take through the peninsula, saying that decision will require more detailed information and probably won't be made until early 1979.

Howard White, secretary of the Pender Harbor and District Ratepayers Association, said Monday Hydro didn't even acknowledge some of the alternative routes proposed by members of his association.

"There's a sense of hopelessness right now," he said.

"There doesn't seem to be any way of getting through to Hydro."

However, he said his group will continue to make presentations to Hydro and try to communicate the association's concerns about the environmental and social impacts of the present transmission line routing.

"We are going to continue fighting and we will demand accountability from Hydro and ELUC (the provincial Environment and Land-Use Committee).

"We are not giving up but it certainly looks bleak now."

White said there is a great deal of concern among the residents of Pender Harbor about the impact of such a transmission line on their area, which they feel would be great both from a residential and recreational point of view.

Don Lockstead, the NDP MLA for Mackenzie, which includes much of the mainland portion of the proposed route, said Monday he has heard from a number of people living on the Sunshine Coast and they are unhappy with the consultant's report.

Lockstead said he hadn't had a chance to read the report himself so was unwilling to make any comments.

However, he did repeat his earlier position that Hydro should be looking more at alternative sources of power such as wood waste, thermal coal or natural gas.

While these alternatives are being studied there should be a two-year moratorium on the transmission line, he said.

Chances Great If You Get Hunting Licence

BISMARCK, N. D. (AP) — North Dakota bighorn hunters have a 92 per cent chance of being successful.

But the odds against ever becoming a hunter are staggering.

Each year between 3,000 and 4,000 hopefuls apply for a bighorn permit with only a handful being drawn.

This year 2,800 hunters applied, but only 10 were drawn by lottery for the hunt, which runs until Nov. 5.

The North Dakota Game and Fish Department planted 18 California bighorns in the Badlands of western North Dakota in 1956. Now a herd of 250 to 300 animals roams four main ranges.

Awkward Attic Nooks Attract Wasp Species

OTTAWA (CP) — The agriculture department says a species of city-living, garbage-munching wasp new to eastern Canada has turned up during the summer and is bedding down for a cozy winter.

The species was detected here this summer at the exhibition grounds. It is particularly fond of such fast food leftovers as ice cream and hamburgers, department entomologist Rolf Boch said Monday.

The wasp, known as Vespula germanica, was found in the U.S. in the 1950s and has been spreading through the Eastern Seaboard over the last 20 years, he said.

"We don't know if they have reached their northern limit of distribution or whether they can survive in the wilderness during the harsh Canadian winter. But in the surburban areas, the queens will hibernate in warm attics where . . . they can be protected from external hazards."

Unlike native wasps, which build exposed nests under eaves and on trees, the new species will build inside the walls of houses and in places difficult to get at, Boch said.

"These wasps are very numerous and seem to specialize in garbage at take-out food centres," Boch said. "People will have to be more careful about how they dispose of food. Fast food outlets should also have closed garbage containers."

He said homeowners should be sure the eaves and possible attic entrances such as knot-holes are properly sealed so the wasps cannot get in.

THIRSTY MISHAP

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — Truck driver Fonnie Meyer is under treatment for an unusual drinking problem. Meyer, 23, has cut his daily intake of water to about 26 quarts during the hospital treatment.

He told newspapers his thirst increased four years ago after a car accident left him unconscious for four days.

"When I woke up I had this terrible thirst," he said. "I just drank and drank and drank but I couldn't quench my thirst. My consumption was between 70 and 80 litres a day, plus cool drinks and tea or coffee. The doctor said my pituitary gland wasn't producing a certain kind of hormone."

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

SOLAR SUPERBUG? This two-seater electric car does, indeed, look like an angular Volkswagen that has sprouted solar collector panels. On display at the National Energy Expo in Washington, D.C., recently, the car can be charged from an outlet and picks up extra power from the sun through the solar panels.

Helmets on Motorcyclists Save Lives, Study Shows

WASHINGTON (WP) — Motorcyclists wearing helmets receive 23 percent fewer head injuries than unhelmeted cyclists, according to a new study conducted for the Department of Transportation.

The study, performed by a University of Southern California safety expert, also said the major cause of motorcycle accidents is the failure of motorists to see motorcycles in traffic.

The detailed analysis of 900 accidents in the Los Angeles area over the past 2 1-2 years by Prof. Harry Hurt was designed to determine the causes of motorcycle accidents and injuries and methods of reducing both.

Some 45 percent of all motorcycle accidents involved an automobile or other vehicle turning left into the path of a motorcycle, the study said.

Of the 900 accident reports in the sample, there were 54 fatalities. Eighty-five percent of those victims were not wearing helmets.

Last June, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration released data showing that 4,082 motorcyclists were killed in traffic accidents in 1977, an increase of 23 percent over a year ago.

NHTSA administrator Joan Claybrook said the results of the USC study represented new evidence that helmets, and helmet laws, can help save lives.

"The value of helmets has been documented for more than 30 years," Claybrook said. "In 15 states that repealed their helmet-use laws since 1976, and that report whether cyclists involved in accidentrs were wearing helmets, the number of fatalities involving helmetless cyclists showed a dramatic increase of 88 percent from 1976 to 1977."

Claybrook has been deluged at recent NHTSA town meetings across the country with requests from motorcycle clubs to prod NHTSA into moving faster on the issue of motorcycle safety regulation.

Tuesday, she urged motorcyclists to wear yellow jackets or clothing to make them more visible in traffic.

Other findings of the USC study show:

—More than half of the motorcycle drivers surveyed had less than six months experience with the motorcycle involved in their accident, although total bike-riding eperience averaged more than three years.

—About 92 percent of the respondents had no formal or professional training in motorcycle riding.

—Nearly 12 percent of all accidents involved some alcohol consummption by the motorcycle driver, but about 53 percent of the fatal accidents involved a motorcycle driver who was drinking.

—Forty-one percent of the accidents are caused by motorcyclist error in judgment, or in "man-machine relationship." Vehicle failures account for only about 3 percent of all accidents.

—About 12 percent of the cyclists surveyed either had no license or were riding with a revoked locense.

—Females constitute 2 percent of the motorcycle rider population, but are involved in 3.8 percent of the accidents.

Suspects Nabbed In Bahamas

MONTREAL (CP) — Two suspected bank robbers, arrested in the Bahamas Monday in connection with the theft of more than $2 million in travellers' cheques and securities here last summer, were to be flown to Montreal as soon as possible.

A police spokesman said today investigators were in the Bahamas and were expected back today or Thursday.

The two men were arrested in the Bahamas as they tried to board a plane for the United States. U.S. customs officers seized $21,000 in travellers' cheques during inspection of their baggage.

The cheques are believed to be part of the loot from a robbery in nearby Laval in which thieves broke into a bank during the Canada Day weekend and rifled more than 120 safety deposit boxes.

Ship May Help Fill Gap In History

OTTAWA (CP) — The discovery of the San Juan, a 16th century Spanish galleon off Labrador's coast may help fill a 40-year gap in Canadian history, says the director of the public archives.

"We know there is a long gap between Cabot and Jacques Cartier," Wilfred Smith said Monday at a news conference announcing the find. "From Cartier on there is a written record, but what happened between 1497 and 1534?"

The ship, which sank with a full cargo of whale oil in 1565 and was found by underwater archaeologist Robert Grenier and a group of divers in September, may help fill that void.

The vessel was found near Red Bay, a tiny fishing community 550 kilometres north of St. John's, after its possible existence was pointed out to him by Ottawa archivist Selma Barkham.

Mrs. Barkham began her research after she came upon references to Basque whalers while doing research for the restoration of the French fortress of Louisbourg in Nova Scotia.

Documents she discovered four years ago in Spain mentioned a dispute over barrels of whale oil from a ship which sank at Buttus in Terra Nueva —the New World.

Buttus was a small port established near Red Bay 400 years ago by the Basques who built and worked the vessel which was used for whaling.

At the news conference Grenier and Mrs. Barkham displayed pieces of whale bone left on shore by the Basques as well as pieces of red, Iberian tile used to roof their cabins.

"The ship is in an excellent state of preservation," Grenier said. "I've never seen a set-up like it. The land site (Buttus) is only 100 metres away and rocks found there are identical to ballast found in the bottom of the hull."

Grenier, who helped uncover an ancient Greek ship near Cyprus for the National Geographic Society, said the oak planks used to build the 70-man craft and the staves from the barrels remain in excellent condition.

"Their surface is a little spongy, like cardboard, but the structure is still strong," he said.

Grenier and his group worked 14-hour days and used a home-made dredge to uncover the wreck which was in 10 metres of water that never went above three degrees Celsius while 80-kilometre winds lashed the waves above them.

They found some pottery at the wreck but no money or gold. Mrs. Barkham said the Spanish documents indicated the crew managed to salvage most of their personal belongings and weapons when the squall, which wrecked the ship, subsided.

She said that as many as 800 men and boys — no women because it was never a permanent settlement — may have lived at Buttus which the Basques never used as a trading post with Indians or Eskimos.

The documents she found in Spain say two whalers were killed by Indians.

The establishment, being excavated by Dr. James Tuck of Memorial University, was abandoned when humpback whales became scarce and the ships were recalled to Spain to become warships in the Spanish Armada of 1588.

The documents uncovered by Mrs. Barkham include Canada's first will — written by Juan Martinez deLarrume in 1557 at Buttus — as well as the record of one of Canada's first business transactions, the 1572 purchase of four rowboats by Joannes deLecho at Chateau Bay, near Red Bay.

Grenier said that ideally he would like to raise the San Juan and preserve in a museum, but that that is unlikely because of the amount of money required.

Henri Tetu, director of the historic parks and sites branch of the department of Indian and northern affairs, said the vessel's future will depend on a decision of the historic sites and monuments board next month.

Florida Holds Treasure

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — The state of Florida, granted another delay, will hang onto $2.3 million in Spanish treasure rather than return the coins and artifacts to the salvage firm that hauled it up from the ocean floor.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals granted a request from the state to delay return of the treasure.

Earlier, officials of the salvage firm, Treasure Salvors Inc. of Key West, were exuberant as state Archives Director Ross Morrell complied with a U.S. marshal's order and began transferring the treasure rather than face arrest.

"It's seven to 10 days more," said Bleth McHaley, executive vice-president of Treasure Salvors, which found the sunken treasure off the Florida coast in 1971.

"Again, we went right down to the wire," Ms. McHaley said. "This time, everything was packed and on iron dollies, ready to go out to the plane. Someone came in and said the court order had come in."

Ms. McHaley said her firm will appeal.

The controversy over the 1,847 silver coins and artifacts began in in 1971 when Treasure Salvors discovered the wreck of the Nuestra Senora de Atocha off the Florida Keys, where it sank in a strom in 1622.

The state of Florida gets 25 per cent of the value of any treasure recovered in U.S. waters, and the searchers keep 75 per cent, but a U.S. Supreme Court ruling later placed the wreck outside U.S. territorial waters. The state, which has had custody of the treasure since 1971, refused to relinquish control.

U.S. District Judge William Mehrtens ruled in 1976 that the state was not entitled to the treasure, a decision upheld by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans. But when Mehrtens ordered federal marshals to pick up the treasure last April, his action was temporarily blocked by the appeals court.

The appeals court referred the case back to Mehrtens, who ruled Oct. 16 that the state had to post a $1.5-million bond while it continued to appeal or give the treasure back to Treasure Salvors.

A 5th Circuit decision Friday to lift another temporary stay that had been issued against Mehrtens's order opened the way for Treasure Salvors to claim the treasure Monday. But, in a surprise move, the New Orleans court awarded the state a delay.

Assistant Attorney-General Marty Friedman said the state feared Treasure Salvors would sell the coins while state lawyers were continuing to appeal Mehrtens's order.

Ms. McHaley said Treasure Salvors had no immediate intentions to sell any of the treasure.

The entire treasure aboard the Atocha, which went down with a sister ship, La Margarita, in a storm in 1622 while en route to Spain, has been valued at between $100 million and $600 million.

Freezing Free Ride To Britain

LONDON (Reuter) — A U.S. man who stowed away in the hold of a British Airways Boeing 747 flying to London from Detroit was found nearly unconscious with cold on arrival today.

Thomas Brady Coles, 21, of Grosse Pointe, Mich., was found after an eight-hour flight, huddled in a packing case with only a raincoat on and suffering from the effects of hypothermia and depressurization.

"We couldn't believe our eyes — he looked terrible," said a baggage loader who opened the hold. "At first we thought he was dead."

Coles was rushed to a nearby medical centre, given a mug of hot soup, a hot-water bottle and wrapped in blankets.

Airline officials said he sneaked aboard the jumbo jet "because he had a great desire to see the United Kingdom."

"He is being detained for the time being and provisional arrangements have been made to remove him back to Detroit tomorrow morning," a British home office spokesman said.

Tories Take Gallup Lead

TORONTO (CP) — Gallup poll results released today show the federal Progressive Conservatives ahead of the Liberals among decided voters for the first time since January, 1977.

The Conservatives led with 42 per cent of the decided vote in the survey conducted early in October, compared with 37 per cent for the Liberals and 17 per cent for the New Democratic Party. Other parties accounted for four per cent.

Thirty-two per cent of the electorate remains undecided on which party to support.

Poll results released early in October from a survey in September showed the Liberals ahead with 41 per cent, followed by the Conservatives with 38 and the NDP with 17.

Taken less than two weeks before the Oct. 16 byelections in 15 federal ridings, the latest poll shows the Liberals hold a strong lead in Quebec but have lost strength in other parts of the country.

Gallup polls taken after the Liberal victory in the 1974 general election gave them a greater share of the decided vote until March, 1976, when the Conservatives took the lead and held it until the Liberals started leading again in February, 1977.

BNA Deal Bogs Down

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau failed today to convince all the premiers to accept a package giving the country a truly Canadian constitution with a realignment of federal and provincial powers.

During the final day of a three-day constitutional conference, Trudeau, backed by New Brunswick, Ontario and Manitoba, said a way should be found to allow Canada to amend its constitution without consulting the British Parliament while negotiations continue on power redistribution.

Quebec Premier Rene Levesque strongly objected, saying he is willing to negotiate only a new power sharing arrangement. He would consider patriating the 1867 constitution afterwards.

The premiers of Ontario, Saskatchewan and Newfoundland urged the meeting not to let Quebec's reluctance prevent any changes. They suggested a planned committee of federal and provincial ministers could seek agreements on areas everyone wanted to negotiate.

U.S. Dollar Jumps After Carter's Crisis Surgery

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Applying drastic surgery to aid the ailing dollar, the U.S. government today announced an unprecedented big jump in interest rates, increased gold sales and a huge international currency swap to restore world confidence in American monetary policy.

The dollar rallied immediately and the world price of gold began to decline.

One price quoted for gold was about $222 an ounce, down about $20 from the previous day. Speculators who had invested heavily in gold were suddenly confronted with large losses.

Wall Street responded enthusiastically to the measures. At noon, the Dow Jones Industrial Average, was up 20.87 points to 813.32 in heavy trading.

The U.S. dollar shot upwards a fantastic 5½ per cent against the West German mark in hectic trading on the Frankfurt money exchange and there were dramatic rises against the British pound sterling and the Swiss franc.

In terms of Canadian funds, the U.S. dollar was up 7-100 at $1.1644 in Montreal trading at noon. Pound sterling was down 8 19-25 at $2.3288.

In New York, the Canadian dollar as down 1-20 at $0.8588 and pound sterling was down 7 13-20 at $2.0000.

Financial experts in all three European countries and on Wall Street heaped praise on the Carter announcement and a London dealer for the Chase Manhattan Bank said, "it's like a breath of fresh air" after months in which the dollar reached record lows on all major world money markets.

"This is the sort of action for which we've been waiting so long," one Zurich dealer said. "It should have come sooner."

Certain to set off another round of general increases in interest rates, the Federal Reserve Board boosted its lending rate by a full percentage point to a record 9.5 per cent.

These rises in American rates usually are followed by increases in Canadian rates since Canada must compete for investment funds in the American market.

The Carter government also announced $30 billion in proposed borrowings and currency-swap arrangements with the central banks of West Germany and Japan and the Swiss National Bank. Part of the borrowings will come through the International Monetary Fund.

President Carter said the moves, which stunned international currency dealers, were necessary "to correct the excessive decline in the dollar which has recently occurred."

Canadian investment experts said the drastic American moves indicated the economic power still available to the United States "when pushed to the wall." High American interest rates may restrain American investments abroad, including Canada.

Carter said in a statement that the continuing decline in the U.S. dollar exchange rate was not warranted by the fundamental economic situation.

"That decline threatens economic progress at home, and abroad the success of our anti-inflation program."

U.S. Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal told reporters that the U.S., West Germany and Japan will "intervene in a forceful and co-

Sun, Province Strikebound

VANCOUVER (CP) — Employees of Pacific Press Ltd. walked off the job and set up picket lines today after all-night talks failed to settle a contract dispute.

The walkout came a short time after talks broke off between the company and a joint council of its six unions.

Pacific Press prints The Province and The Vancouver Sun. Production of the afternoon Sun was halted by the walkout, although the morning Province was earlier distributed.

(The walkout came as Clark W. Davey of Toronto assumed the position of publisher of the Sun, replacing Stuart Keate who has retired. See story on page 12).

The guild and the Vancouver Printing Pressmen's Union, two of the six unions involved, were in a legal position to strike at midnight Tuesday when their contracts expired.

The company had served its 1,400 employees with a lockout notice also timed for midnight Tuesday.

Phil Needham, co-chairman of the joint council, said before the walkout that talks had stalled on key issues in the dispute and these were not being discussed.

Economic issues were also

NASH SALARY PROBE

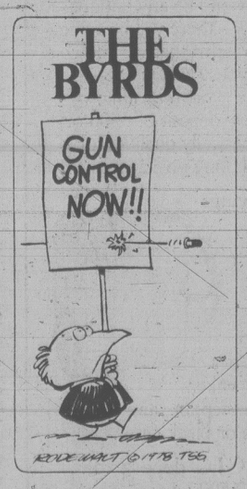

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative MP David MacDonald drew a government promise Tuesday to look into what he said appears to be an extraordinary salary and contract negotiated by Knowlton Nash as the new reader of CBC's nightly television news program, The National.

MacDonald (Egmont) referred in the Commons to published reports that Nash is to receive about $90,000 annually for five years.

MacDonald said Nash's previous salary as head of the Crown corporation's news and current affairs department was $45,000.

The Conservative MP, who shadows the operations of the secretary of state ministry, which is responsible to Parliament for the CBC, also said there is some question about possible violation of a collective bargaining agreement with CBC staff announcers.

Nash himself was involved in the negotiations, if not the decision, about the hiring of the new news reader to replace Peter Kent, McDonald said.

710 Miles of Tanzania Seized, Claims Amin

NAIROBI (UPI) — Uganda announced today that President Idi Amin's forces have captured 710 square miles of Tanzanian territory and Uganda has now annexed the northwestern tip of its East African neighbor.

In the first direct confirmation of the Ugandan attack, Radio Kampala said in a special announcement that the invasion was ordered by Amin and the nation's defence council as a "retaliatory" measure for a Tanzanian attack into southern Uganda.

The radio said the Ugandan forces have captured 710 square miles of Tanzanian territory west of Lake Victoria. It said the Tanzanians held 400 square miles of Ugandan soil.

Calling the attack "a record in world history," the broadcast said that the defence council decided that the new border between the two countries would be the Kagera river, giving the Ugandans a triangular slice of northwestern Tanzania.

Meanwhile, Amin said he wants peace, possibly with Cuban mediation.

Breaking its silence on the two days of fighting between the two east African neighbors, Radio Kampala said Amin had sent two appeals for peace to Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere, but received no reply.

Amin repeated his assertion that Tanzanian forces invaded Uganda five days ago.

THREE GRAIN ELEVATORS BURN DOWN

OLDS, Alta. (CP) — A spectacular fire burned out of control for about 4½ hours this morning, destroying three grain elevators and three recreational buildings.

RCMP say the fire was brought under control at about 9:30 a.m. after fire crews from Calgary, Red Deer and various surrounding communities came to the aid of the local volunteer fire department.

"They did a hell of job," said S.Sgt Earl Dungate of the Olds RCMP detachment.

Logging Ban Lifted In Tsitika Valley

The provincial government today lifted the five-year-old logging moratorium on the 100,000-acre Tsitika River valley on north eastern Vancouver Island.

Under the terms of the Tsitika Watershed Integrated Resource Plan approved by the cabinet's Environment and Land Use Committee (ELUC), 58,557 acres will be open to clearcut logging operations and additional acreage will be accesible through selective cutting.

The Tsitika planning committee report endorsed by ELUC states:

—Clearcut zones up to 600 acres in area should be allowed.

—Selective cutting should be permitted along water courses and in areas set aside for recreational value.

—The visual impact of logging be minimized by utilizing landscape logging techniques on those areas highly visible form the North Island Highway and Johnstone Strait.

—Logging companies should study alternatives to using the Tsitika estuary as a dumping ground. If alternatives are economically unfeasible further environmental impact studies should be undertaken.

The planning committee's final report has been rejected by the Federation of B.C. Naturalists and other environmental groups.

The federation represents 33 clubs in the province, 10 of which are on Vancouver Island.

David Orton, spokesman for the naturalists, described the Tsitika report as an Alice in Wonderland management plan.

"If they call that an integrated management plan, then God help the other resources of this province — water, fish, recreation and forest lands," he said.

Orton said that while the stand of his group is for the preservation of the Tsitika Valley, it also takes the position that if it is to be logged, then the logging methods used in the watershed should be of an entirely new type — fully protective of the forests, fisheries, wildlife, environmental and recreational interests.

"We are not opposed to logging, but we are opposed to logging this valley in the traditional manner," he said.

Basically the management plan endorses the traditional bare-land forestry practices of logging companies. It allows large clearcut zones on the steeply sloped valley.

"Large scale clearcuts up to 600 acres as proposed by the report will degrade and fundamentally change the environment to the detriment of fisheries and wildlife.

"The sick joke of this anyway is that 643 miles of roads are slated for construction

Big Lottery Win Saves Family Home

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Bragg were running out of cash and on the brink of selling the family home — but today they are $100,000 richer due to the Western Express lottery and they won't have to move after all.

Bragg, a 52-year-old electrician, has not worked for eight months due to a stroke and the family's savings were about gone.

There are five children, three still at home, and it seemed the family would have to take a small apartment somewhere.

But their lottery win has changed all that.

"There must be a God because this is a miracle," said Tim Bragg, 25, the eldest son, who is looking after the three youngest children today.

"Mom and dad were so happy about this — it was marvellous. It couldn't have come at a better time."

Mr. and Mrs. Bragg flew to Winnipeg to pick up the $100,000 cheque Monday and were on their way back to Victoria today.

It was the first trip for Bragg since his illness and it cheered him immensely, the family said.

The family's troubles began eight months ago when Bragg had a mild stroke while driving home from work and a minor car crash resulted.

He spent the night in hospital but the next day suffered a massive stroke. During tests that followed, blood clots and other problems were discovered and three months later he underwent a 7½-hour operation.

He has been recovering very slowly.

He was released from hospital three weeks ago and was depressed about the family's dwindling financial reserves. Mrs. Bragg, who has been a part-time clerk, was considering retraining for a full-time job to support the family.

There was the question of whether they could afford to keep the house.

Then on Wednesday Mrs. Bragg watched the Express lottery draw, writing down the winning numbers. It wasn't until several hours later that she checked her tickets and discovered she had won the top prize.

She phoned radio stations to try to get confirmation on the number and then spent a restless night waiting for the Winnipeg lottery office to open so she could phone and double-check the result.

She decided to fly to Winnipeg to give her husband his first trip in months.

Lottery spokesman Bill Weissmann said Mrs. Bragg kept saying how happy and relieved she was.

"She said this was the best therapy her husband could get. Now he has peace of mind and can concentrate on getting well again," Weissman said.

"He was very happy and very emotional about the win."

The couple lives at 1280 Balmoral Road.
